Building the bioethics tools of a community council to the future: the ecosystemic gap

Antoine Boudreau LeBlanc ¹✉

These are times of crisis. Recently, the COVID-19 pandemic and the resurgence of a form of Cold War raised international concerns about Health & Well-Being, Climate & Biodiversity, and Technology & Economy. Articulating bridges between disciplines, between cultures and between knowledges has never been more urgent to accelerate the translation of values and policies into actions. This comprehensive review argues for a radical ecosystemic approach to bridge the Medical & Environmental fields (studies, sectors, and technics) in an integrated management practice of Care, Production & Biodiversity. As bridging implies solving the epistemological gap, the argument emphasizes the need to raise awareness with theoretical hybridizations, fieldwork hypotheses, and working theories. According to Van Rensselaer Potter, who coined the term 'bioethics', awareness means to refocus the Medical & Environmental studies and surveillance processes from a target (e.g., the disease, the pathogen, or the resource) to its context (e.g., adding history, demography and ecology). Thus reframed, concerned researchers, leaders, and citizens should invest their effort in preparing the (contextual) terrain for ever-more organizational resilience. We conclude on the need for actions to shape the Health & Biodiversity determinants, to improve communication systems, data-sharing networks, and responsible innovations, and to foster knowledge translation to envision a better realistic future.

"Ecology's uneconomic, but with another kind of logic economy's unecologic." (Potter 1988, p.9)

Introduction

We are in a time of crisis: the emergence of pandemic agents, loss of biodiversity, climate change, geopolitical conflicts, etc. Recently, the COVID-19 pandemic and the resurgence of a form of Cold War spread large in international discussions (Vallés and Rendtorff, 2021; Diaz-Castro et al., 2023). These raise several concerns on Health (see the Manhattan 2004 to Berlin 2019 Principles), Climate (see the 2022 Conference of Parties 27 in Egypt) and Biodiversity (see the 2022 COP15 in Kunming-Montreal). Moreover, these concerns complexity and intensify when intertwined with Technology (see the Joint Partnership on Artificial Intelligence) and the Economy (the 2022 Group 20 in Indonesia). Klugman, Pamela M. Dalinis, 2013-01-02 Klugman and Dalinis initiate a much needed conversation about the ethical and policy concerns facing health care providers in the rural United States This volume initiates a much needed conversation about the ethical and policy concerns facing health care providers in the rural United States Although 21 percent of the population lives in rural areas only 11 percent of physicians practice there What challenges do health care workers face in remote locations What are the differences between rural and urban health care practices What particular ethical issues arise in treating residents of small communities Craig M Klugman and Pamela M Dalinis gather philosophers lawyers physicians nurses and researchers to discuss these and other questions offering a multidisciplinary overview of rural health care in the United States Rural practitioners often practice within small tight knit communities socializing with their patients outside the examination room The residents are more likely to have limited finances and to lack health insurance Physicians may have insufficient resources to treat their patients who often have to travel great distances to see a doctor The first part of the book analyzes the differences between rural and urban cultures and discusses the difficulties in treating patients in rural settings The second part features the personal narratives of rural health care providers who share their experiences and insights The last part introduces unique ethical challenges facing rural health care providers and proposes innovative solutions to those problems This volume is a useful resource for bioethicists members of rural bioethics committees and networks policy makers teachers of health care providers and rural practitioners themselves

Building Context Parker Miller, 2021 The field of bioethics originated from failures in medical research and provided a framework for medical decision making and research ethics with the advent of its four core principles justice autonomy non maleficence and beneficence However these core principles often overlook more complex issues related to health In this thesis I take a critical look at traditional bioethics to demonstrate why more specific fields of bioethics like public health ethics and urban bioethics are necessary I then look at the origins of urban bioethics to better understand the necessity for the field and the principles necessary for its implementation Solidarity and agency are established principles of urban bioethics and I will argue the need to add respect for community to the urban bioethics toolbox Based on these principles I argue the urban bioethicist has to understand the context of individuals and communities to properly apply agency solidarity and respect for community The most appropriate way to build this context is through qualitative research Qualitative research is uniquely suited for this task based on the nature of the field and the information it offers related to each of the principles of urban bioethics

Reforming Social Sciences, Humanities and Higher Education in Eastern Europe and CIS after 1991 Olga Breskaya, Anatoli Mikhailov, 2014-06-26 This volume consists of articles prepared after two conferences organized by the European Humanities University in Vilnius Lithuania in 2011 and in 2012 The focus of both conferences was concentrated on the development of reforms and changes in higher education in the social sciences and humanities in Eastern Europe during the last two decades The collapse of the communist system in Eastern Europe was followed by the enormous expansion of institutions of higher
