Computer Programs for Literary Analysis John R. Abercrombie, 1986 Computer Literature Bibliography: 1964-1967
W. W. Youden, 1965 Programming Literature Rebecca Roach, 2025-12-18 This is a book about the messy archival worlds of literature and computing and the myriad of relations that have existed between the two Before J M Coetzee was a writer of Nobel Prize winning novels the South African was a programmer for one of the most significant Cold War supercomputer projects in Britain Experimental British writer Christine Brooke Rose worked at Bletchley Park with Alan Turing When not opining about modernism Canadian literary critic Hugh Kenner was a devoted computer hobbyist Literary scholars have often not known what to make of these other careers intimidating irrelevant outside of the scope of literary studies surely When they do make links it is often via the frame of formal logic that has dominated discussions of both computer history and literary modernism This book starts from a different assumption that far from irrelevant these material experiences were significant in the development of the literary projects of writers including Coetzee Brooke Rose Kenner William Gaddis and Kamau Brathwaite It contends that it is in the practice and the archive rather than on the plane of abstraction that we can best see this influence Addressing literary scholars media and computer historians and digital theorists alike Programming Literature productively reframes contemporary debates around artificial intelligence the value of the humanities and tech culture by emphasizing just how material these worlds have always been Computer Methods for Literary Research
