Computers And Man:

Turing's Man J. David Bolter, 2014-02-01 Trained in both classics and computer science Bolter considers the cultural impact of computers on our age comparing the computer to earlier technologies that redefined fundamental notions of time space language memory and human creativity Surprisingly he finds that in many ways the outlook of the computer age bears more resemblance to that of the ancient world than to that of the Enlightenment The classical philosopher and the computer programmer share a suspicion of infinity an acceptance of necessary limitations on human achievement and a belief that results are more important than motives Although Bolter fears that the growing use of computers may well diminish out culture s sense of the historical and intellectual context of human endeavor he contends that the computer also offers new ways of looking at intellectual freedom creativity and the conservation of precious resources Computers and Man Richard C. Subcommittee on Science, Research, and Development, 1971 Moral Dimension of Man in the Age of Computers Adam Drozdek, 1995 Reason has very often been seen as the highest faculty of man and therefore a strong tendency to attempt to analyze man mainly in terms of the rational dimension exists This tendency was strong in antiquity and was given renewed attention in the seventeenth century In recent times developments and advancements in computer science have given the notion renewed scientific support In this tradition man is not only analyzed in terms of rational faculties but is often reduced to them The philosophical conclusions drawn from computer science strengthen the view that man s highest faculty is reason This work argues that this view of man is limited and insufficient because man is primarily a moral being and the rational dimension is only instrumental in the developing and in exercising what is most important in man the moral dimension Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports , 1967 Medical and Health Related Sciences Thesaurus National Institutes of Health (U.S.), 1978 Indexing terms used in CRISP Computer Retrieval of Information on Scientific Projects and in Research grants index Alphabetical arrangement Cross references under terms CRISP Thesaurus , 1989 Special Issue on Computers and Their Applications , 1967 Man and the Computer John G.
