Computers and the Teaching of Writing in American Higher Education, 1979-1994 Gail E. Hawisher, 1996 This book is a history composed of histories Its particular focus is the way in which computers entered and changed the field of composition studies a field that defines itself both as a research community and as a community of teachers This may have a somewhat sinister suggestion that technology alone has agency but this history made of histories is not principally about computers It is about people the teachers and scholars who have adapted the computer to their personal and professional purposes From the authors perspectives change in technology drives changes in the ways we live and work and we agents to a degree in control of our own lives use technology to achieve our human purposes REVIEW This book reminds those of us now using computers to teach writing where we have been and it brings those who are just entering the field up to date More important it will inform administrators curriculum specialists and others responsible for implementing the future uses of technology in writing instruction Computers and Composition Electronic Quills Bertram C. Bruce, Andee Rubin, with contributi Barnhardt and Teachers, 2013-11-05 This volume centers on the words and experiences of teachers and students who used QUILL a software package developed by the authors to aid in writing instruction It looks in detail at the stories of these early users and considers questions relevant for other teachers students researchers and developers of educational innovations Questions posed include What does it mean to develop an environment for literacy in an actual classroom How can a teacher create an environment in which students work together toward meaningful goals How can a teacher promote the rich communication so necessary for developing language What is the role of technology in the practice and development of literacy The examination of the QUILL experiences provides a fuller and more revealing account of what it meant to use QUILL than would have been possible through standard evaluation techniques At the same time the focus on the particulars also finds analogues in analyses of similar pieces of open ended software or educational innovations in general
