

"This book was not written—it was assembled. It is a vehicle for the long overdue recognition of the spirit that lived within Master Model Engineer Edward T. Packard, since it was that indomitable, resolute dedication to providing 'wings for everyone' that created a lifelong hobby for so many of us, a hobby that made it possible for us to dream dreams of flying—of building or flying our own planes, of being test pilots, or of serving in the military. Dreams are the fabric of which Ed Packard was made. Had he not had dreams, there would never have been a Cleveland Model and Supply Company, and millions of us would never have experienced the satisfaction of the accomplishment of model construction and the euphoria of flight, one of the great joys of life."—from the Preface

"Throughout life we are touched by many people. They leave us with many things: love, inspiration and a desire to be a better person. Ed Packard—a lover of aviation and his model aircraft—created plans so accurate in scale and design and of such refined craftsmanship that many of us have been able to take our places in the world of aviation. Thank you, Ed."

—Paul Peberzny, Founder and Chairman, Experimental Aircraft Association

"Aviation's Great Recruster looks at an immigrant family whose oldest son's initiative and fascination with aircraft and flight led him into his career path at the age of thirteen. This cottage industry enterprise came to occupy his entire family for the next 77 years. It is a paean to the incubation of aviation, to the social and political atmosphere that accompanied it, and to Cleveland as the nexus for its germination."

—Sidney H. Bradd, Board of Directors, Crawford Auto Aviation Museum, Cleveland, Ohio

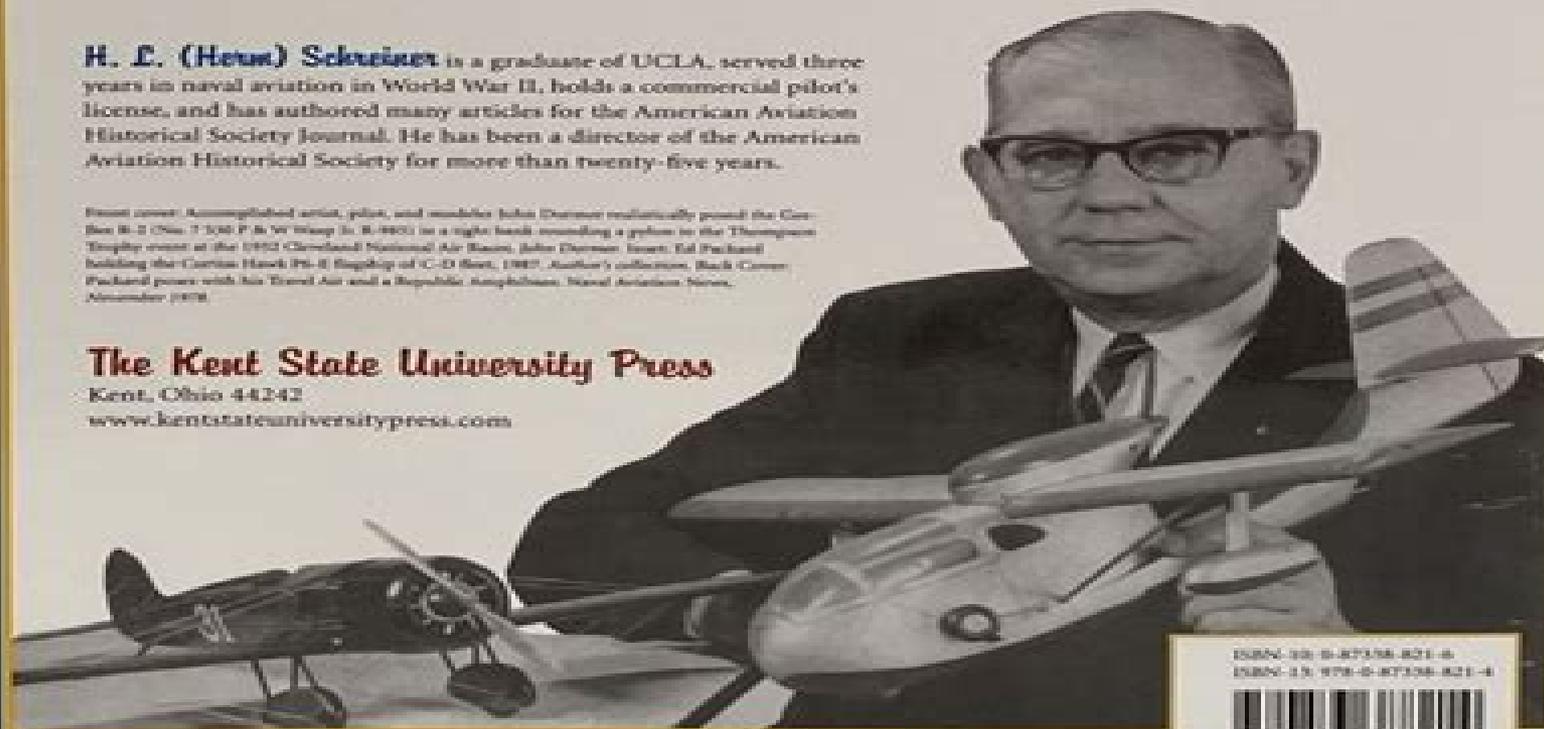

H. L. (Herb) Schweitzer is a graduate of UCLA, served three years in naval aviation in World War II, holds a commercial pilot's license, and has authored many articles for the American Aviation Historical Society Journal. He has been a director of the American Aviation Historical Society for more than twenty-five years.
