

The Fury Of Hurricane Katrina

Once upon a gloomy day in New Orleans,
Evacuate! Evacuate! was the urgent cry,
But many residents did not heed the warning,
And merely responded with a sigh.

Hurricane Katrina approaches The Crescent City
With powerful, whirling winds creating huge waves,
Towering cloud masses producing heavy rain,
The fury of the hurricane resorting to destructive ways.

Years ago, levees were built to protect the city
To hold back the rising water of Lake Pontchartrain.
Then people marveled and felt secure
If a hurricane brought a deluge of rain.

Wait - Slowly at last comes the dawn
Waking up the inundated earth,
Filling hearts with helplessness and despair,
And forgetting about the hurricane's birth.

A brilliant sun hovers over the horror- struck city
With survivors clinging desperately to rooftops in fear.
Energetic workers and rescue helicopters appear,
The stench and putrid water difficult to bear.

As people and time cross the bayou,
And hurricane victims' search for a new road,
The festivities of the Mardi Gras wait on the wing.
Surely - New Orleans will rise again as foretold.

A Hurricane Is Poems:

A Hurricane Is Angelo Verga, 2002 Hurricane Blues Philip C. Kolin, Susan Swartwout, 2006 Hurricane Blues is a unique artifact of American history an anthology of original poems about the two most infamous hurricanes of 2005 Many of these poems are eyewitness accounts written by both distinguished and emerging poets all of whom were moved by the destruction of a legendary American city and the roughly 300 mile radius within Katrina's wrath This collection not only records history but serves in some way as a balm a relief effort toward the inevitable reconstruction of the region Accordingly all proceeds from Hurricane Blues will go toward the relief effort This is poetry as bread cast upon the surface of the waters Hurricane Walk Diann Blakely, 2017-03-15 Hurricane Walk is Diann Blakely's first volume of poetry Originally published in 1992 it was named one of the ten best verse collections published that year by the St Louis Post Dispatch With this collection Blakely artfully mines the empathic center of each poem fearlessly crafting an achingly personal portrait of contemporary life and family that is both sweet and razor sharp What poetry does best and perhaps does most plaintively Blakely has said is to remind us of the absences and losses of the world we currently suffer and revel in It is very much the language of intimacy And this is what her work achieves at its best Blakely wrings a refined sense of intimacy from her carefully crafted verses revealing the fragile essence of the female experience and moreover of the human condition
