The Aviation Legacy of Henry & Edsel Ford

By Timothy J. O'Callaghan

"Ford Motor Company's entrance into the field of aeronautics is the greatest incentive to commercial aviation in the history of flying." Detroit News 8/13/25

"It took the entry of the Fords into the business of using airplanes to win the recognition of the air transport by the government." New York Times 11/14/26

His advertising has done more to popularize flying among the reading public than all the stunts that have been stunted at the risk of neck and limb." Aero Digest Mar. '28

"One of the most important events in the selling of aviation to the general public was the entry of Henry Ford into airplane manufacturing." Smithsonian Institute 1985

"The whole thing would have been impossible without your backing and encouragement." Letter to Edsel Ford from Commander Richard Byrd concerning his Arctic flight. 4/4/26

The year 2003 marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Ford Motor Company and the Wright Brothers' first controlled, powered flight at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. While most people are aware of the Fords' contribution to the automotive industry, most are largely unaware of their contribution to the development of mass production of large airplanes and their impact on commercial and military aviation. 1925 stands out as the beginning of this aviation legacy: January - Ford Airport, Dearborn, Michigan, considered by many to be the finest in the nation, was dedicated; April - the Ford Air Transportation Service was inaugurated between Dearborn and Cleveland, Ohio to demonstrate the safety and reliability of commercial aviation; August - the Stout Metal Airplane Company was purchased; September - The Fords became the main sponsors of the first Commercial Airplane Reliability Tour; November - the first sale of a Ford Plane was made to the John Wanamaker Company of New York City.

This book chronicles that aviation legacy.
