Academic Communities Disciplinary Conventions:

Academic Communities/Disciplinary Conventions Bonnie Beedles, Michael Petracca, 2001 Unique in approach this book explores the similarities and differences in various discipline specific epistemologic and rhetorical conventions and how the two are related Each chapter is organized around a shared content topic then divided into Science Social Science and Humanities sections and then two specific disciplinary units each of which addresses the chapter s topic from the discipline s perspective Features essays that span a range of genres audiences and levels of difficulty and that explore timely and engaging topics within such broad areas as identity and consciousness gender and sexuality capital economics and the environment from the perspectives of the more traditional fields such as sociology literary studies biochemistry and others as well as relatively new and exciting fields such as evolutionary psychology computer science genetics ethnic studies lesbian and gay studies social ecology and cultural studies Articles range from those written in a popular and reader friendly journalistic tone to more difficult scholarly pieces Includes the scientific report format as well as the academic essay typically produced by humanists Rhetorical modes and skills are discussed as they arise within writing assignments so that their specificity in different contexts is clear For anyone interested in the similarities and differences of the techniques and conventions of academic writing in the different disciplines

Teaching Academic Writing as a Discipline-Specific Skill in Higher Education Ezza, El-Sadig Y., Drid, Touria, 2019-12-27 It is now held that writing influences and is influenced by the discipline where it occurs The representations that writers employ to produce and comprehend texts are said to be sensitive to the specificities of their disciplinary discourse communities This exposes writers to divergent disciplinary demands and expectations on what counts as good and appropriate writing in terms of generic structure discourse features and stylistic preferences reflecting dissimilar practices Because of such exigencies academic writing seems at times to be very challenging especially for novice scholars Thus any attempt to perceive the function of academic writing in higher education or to evaluate its quality should not discard the shaping force of the disciplines Teaching Academic Writing as a Discipline Specific Skill in Higher Education is a critical scholarly resource that examines the role of writing within academic circles and the disciplinary practices of writing in scholastic environments The book will also explore the particular difficulties that confront writers in the disciplines as well as the endeavors of educational institutions to develop discipline specific writing traditions among practicing and novice scholars Featuring a range of topics such as blended learning data interpretation and knowledge construction this book is essential for instructors academicians administrators professors researchers and students

The Academic Crisis of the Community College Dennis McGrath, Martin B. Spear, 1991-01-01 What I like most about this book is that the authors do not see community colleges as being separate from other parts of post secondary education The usual view of two year colleges is reductionist perceiving them exclusively in functional ways vocational collegiate remedial etc McGrath and Spear see community colleges as part of the full historical unfolding of educational institutions in the United States and thus critique them as academic institutions This is an important work more intellectually challenging and wide ranging than virtually all books on the subject L Steven Zwerling New York University School of Continuing Education This is a book which will stand out It takes a genuinely fresh integrated approach to a difficult and vexing problem The authors develop a synoptic picture of education in the community college by tracing the ways in which that institution has been shaped The authors present a convincing framework within which they can discuss the past failures of efforts at reform and put forward their own proposals William M Sullivan LaSalle University co author Habits of the Heart The concept of remedialization of the community college is an important contribution to the understanding of community colleges This work is appealing because it draws from and is influenced by a diversity of works in philosophy education theory organization theory and literary analysis I especially appreciate the fact that this book does not proselytize the community college credo nor politicize its function Estela M Bensimon The Pennsylvania State University Strengthening Postgraduate Supervision Sioux McKenna, Jenny Clarence-Fincham, Chrissie Boughey, Harry Wels, Henk van den Heavel, 2017-03-22 An excellent collection of diverse and deeply reflective perspectives All offer insights into the multiple challenges confronted in improving the quality and depth of postgraduate supervision increasing throughput and dealing with complexity What is also affirmed is the importance of individual capability in supervision that is developed and nurtured over time and through arduous effort The book will be of value to novice supervisors and to more experienced ones Policy makers planners and administrators looking to enlarge their understanding of the postgraduate terrain in all its complexities will find the mix of theoretical and practical lenses through which the topic is approached particularly illuminating Professor Narend Bajjnath Chief Executive Officer Council on Higher Education Negotiating Academic Writing in an English-Medium University Xiaohao Ma, 2025-06-30 Building on a collection of students perspectives and narratives Ma examines how non native English speaking NNES students negotiate English academic writing EAW to reveal the general patterns and distinct routes in addressing challenges in higher education With the significant expansion of internationalization and student mobility the discourse on cross border education and how NNES students navigate the high stakes educational journey remain pertinent This book presents an in depth qualitative study that investigates how NNES students in an English medium university negotiate the demands of EAW in postgraduate study The research foregrounds NNES students experiences and provides a comprehensive understanding of how they perceive experience and address the challenges of EAW by focusing on a group of mainland Chinese students studying in Hong Kong Key topics discussed include the impact of English as an academic lingua franca on non native speakers the roles of universities in supporting these students and lessons of individuals addressing academic challenges Written for NNES students researchers and practitioners in higher education including language professionals and other specialists in language teaching this compelling text will also interest general readers of academic and linguistic literacy

International Student Adaptation to Academic Writing in Higher Education Ly Thi Tran, 2014-07-08

Academic writing is a key practice in higher education and central to international students academic success in the country of education International Student Adaptation to Academic Writing in Higher Education addresses the prominent forms of adaptation emerging from international students journey to mediate between disciplinary practices cultural norms and personal desires in meaning making It introduces new concepts that present different patterns of international student adaptation including surface adaptation committed adaptation reverse adaptation and hybrid adaptation Drawing on these concepts of adaptation this book provides readers with new and deeper insights into the complex nature of international students adjustment to host institutions It works through many unresolved issues related to cross border students intellectual cultural linguistic and personal negotiations This book presents a trans disciplinary framework for conceptualising international students and lecturers practices within the institutional structure This framework has been developed by drawing on a modified version of Lillis heuristic of talk around text and positioning theory The framework enables an exploration of not only the reasons underpinning international students specific ways of meaning making but also their potential choices in constructing knowledge A distinctive contribution of the book is the development of a dialogical pedagogic model for mutual adaptation between international students and academics rather than the onus being on exclusive adaptation from the students Existing research on international education indicates the significance of reciprocal adaptation between international students and academics Yet very little has been done to conceptualise what mutual adaptation means and what is involved in this process The dialogical model introduced in this book offers concrete steps towards developing reciprocal adaptation of international students and academics within the overarching institutional realities of the university It can be used as a tool to enhance the education of international students in this increasingly internationalised environment This book is a significant contribution to the field of international education It takes a critical stance on contemporary views of globally mobile students The insights into international students voices hidden intentions and their potential choices in meaning making presented in this book will attract dialogues about the critical issues related to inclusive practices internationalised curriculum and institutional responses to the diverse needs of international students

A Geopolitics Of Academic Writing A. Suresh Canagarajah,2002-12-15 A Geopolitics of Academic Writing critiques current scholarly publishing practices exposing the inequalities in the way academic knowledge is constructed and legitimized As a periphery scholar now working in and writing from the center Suresh Canagarajah is uniquely situated to demonstrate how and why contributions from Third World scholars are too often relegated to the perimeter of academic discourse He examines three broad conventions governing academic writing textual concerns matters of languages style tone and structure social customs the rituals governing the interactions of members of the academic community and publishing practices from submission protocols to photocopying and postage requirements Canagarajah argues that the dominance of Western conventions in scholarly communication leads directly to the marginalization or appropriation of the knowledge of Third World communities Joining the Conversation as Professionals Dana Britt Lundell,1999 Disciplinary

Discourses Ken Hyland,2000 Applied Linguistics and Language Study General Editor Christopher N Candlin Chair Professor of Applied Linguistics Centre for English Language Education Communication Research Department of English City University of Hong Kong Hong Kong Since it was first established in the 1970 s the Applied Linguistics and Language Study series has become a major force in the study of practical problems in human communication and language education Drawing extensively on empirical research and theoretical work in linguistics sociology psychology and education the series explores key issues in language acquisition and language use Disciplinary Discourses Social Interactions in Academic Writing presents a series of innovative studies focusing on eight disciplines and a variety of key genres to examine the relationships between the cultures of academic communities and their discursal practices It proposes a framework to account for the interactions between writers and their readers in published academic writing draws clear teaching suggestions and offers detailed methodological principles and suggestions to support further research Drawing on discourse analysis corpus linguistics and the voices of professional insiders Ken Hyland explores how academics use language to organise their professional lives carry out intellectual tasks and reach agreement on what will count as knowledge Through its focus on the features of key genres this book shows what close textual analyses can reveal about the social practices and institutional ideologies of different academic communities and at the same time provides a clear basis for further research The theoretical and descriptive accounts have strong practical implications for the understanding of academic writing and disciplinary communities It will therefore be of great interest to teachers and students of academic writing English for Specific Purposes and discourse analysis more generally Ken Hyland is an Associate Professor in the Department of English City University of Hong Kong Other Voices, Other Worlds MaryAnn Krajnik Crawford,1997 Journal of Economic Literature ,2003
