Academic Preparedness and College Preparation Efforts Jason Hughes Driver,2014 This study examines the relationship between high school efforts at post secondary preparation for college bound students and the expectations of college and university admissions personnel The Advanced Placement AP teachers and administrators at a rural Northwest Florida high school were administered a quantitative survey in order to collect their perceptions on which strategies and methodologies were most appropriate in preparing high school students for both AP exams as well as preparation for college The results of this survey were then shared with admission staff from a college and university located in the same county and their responses collected qualitatively The results demonstrated that while there were some similarities of expectation between the two groups there were also areas of non academic preparation such as self advocacy and understanding of college procedure and terminology that were not determined as pertinent to the high school personnel The study determined a need for increased communication between the college university and high school groups in order to best meet expectations of college preparation at the post secondary level why lanthanides and actinides are separate on the periodic table - Jun 16 2022 web jun 27 2019 the lanthanides and actinides are arranged below with a notation in the main body cell rather than making room for all these elements in the 3b group in the main body of the periodic table because of the f shell electrons these two element groups are also known as the f block elements
