

Chapter 8

Getting started

1, 2 Students' individual work.

- 3 It is sensible to choose 'higher' for any number where more than half the numbers are higher (so any decimal between 0 and 0.5). It is sensible to choose 'lower' for any number where more than half the numbers are lower (so any decimal between 0.5 and 1).

Talking about probability

- Probability only tells us the expected, or 'on average' proportion of 'true' answers. It does not tell us exact proportions.
- The three possible outcomes are not necessarily equally likely.
- Statistical experiments always give a range of outcomes. Different outcomes are possible, so they also have a non-zero probability.
- Any random experiment like this can produce unexpected outcomes, because each of the combinations of red and blue socks is possible.
- We should only give probabilities for outcomes of experiments that have not already been completed. It makes more sense to talk about the probability that it rains tomorrow.
