ASCC Research and Development Platform | Policy Brief #6 | 2023

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- Digital health transformation can address the soaring demand for high-quality health services and increasing healthcare costs in ASEAN.
- ASEAN Member States have taken a further step towards digital health transformation. Nevertheless, there is still room for advancement to narrow the gaps and optimize digital health transformation among ASEAN Member States.
- Currently there is no uniformity in the current landscape of digital health readiness among ASEAN Member States, where there are various legislative products, standards of digital products, infrastructure readiness, and digital literacy.
- Efforts to advance the region's digital health must be able to enforce the enabling factors of digital transformation and be tailored to address challenging aspects within the region.

POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

- Standardize and strengthen the regulatory framework of digital health across the ASEAN region.
- Strengthen regional digital literacy, capacity, and infrastructure by creating more funding, knowledge transfer opportunities, and capacity building programmes.
- Standardize the quality and interoperability of digital applications.
- Enrich multi-sectoral and regional collaboration by establishing relevant collaborative platforms.

TRANSFORMING THE DIGITAL HEALTH LANDSCAPE IN ASEAN

Resilience Development Initiative and Aly Diana

Introduction

While rapid economic growth across ASEAN Member States (AMS) has ushered new levels of wealth, opportunities and quality of life, it has also brought about challenges such as the soaring demand for high-quality health services and rising healthcare costs (Mistry et al., 2019, pp. 7-11). Digital health transformation has the potential to address these issues, and it can be cost-effective in delivering healthcare services even to marginalized areas.

The COVID-19 pandemic has catalysed the sprint towards a technologically advanced health system (EU-ASEAN Business Council, 2022). Investment expansion in tech-enabled businesses is soaring, with telehealth and on-demand care (41%) and predictive analytics (43%) having the highest percentage of capital invested in Southeast Asia's health technology (GPCA, 2021, pp.10-11).

To create best practices on digital health transformation in ASEAN, it is crucial to consolidate its current landscape
