

The background is a medieval manuscript illumination. It features a large central scene with several figures in colorful, ornate clothing. Some figures are seated, while others are standing. There are labels in red and black ink, such as 'roman' at the top right, 'Calliopsis' on the left, and 'romilators' at the bottom left. The style is characteristic of the Book of Hours, with intricate details and a rich color palette. To the right, there is a vertical strip of floral and foliate patterns, including a large blue and red flower. The overall composition is dense and detailed.

The Passions of Rhetoric: Lessing's Theory of Argument and the German Enlightenment E.K. Moore, 2012-12-06 The goal of this book is to ascertain Lessing s views on argumentation and rhetoric I intend to establish that these views constitute a systematic and coherent theory and to argue that for Lessing rhetoric in argument can yield philosophical truth Analysis of Lessing's views also sheds light on the general significance of rhetoric in the 18th century The denial that rhetoric has claims to truth is a long standing prejudice of Western thought This position is evident in Kant's rejection of rhetoric in philosophical discourse But in my view the situation in the 18th century in Germany was somewhat more complex Rhetoric did not die a quiet death but was very much alive in polemical tracts and Lessing was a pivotal figure in a culture dominated by argument and disputation I asked myself why and how this polemical age came to an end and how does the rejection of polemics by the 19th century affect our understanding of the 18th century In the Introduction I address some of these questions and establish a historical framework for the development of polemics in the 18th century Another reason this polemical age has traditionally been seen as problematic for the scholars of the period is because argument disputation and debate cannot be submitted to the same easy analysis as the systematic treatises produced at the end of the century

Documents of Performance in Early Modern England Tiffany Stern, 2009-09-17 As well as play makers and poets playwrights of the early modern period were known as play patchers because their texts were made from separate documents This book is the first to consider all the papers created by authors and theatres by the time of the opening performance recovering types of script not previously known to have existed With chapters on plot scenarios arguments playbills prologues and epilogues songs staged scrolls backstage plots and parts it shows how textually distinct production was from any single unified book And as performance documents were easily lost relegated or reused the story of a play's patchy creation also becomes the story of its co authorship cuts revisions and additions Using a large body of fresh evidence Documents of Performance in Early Modern England brings a wholly new reading to printed and manuscript playbooks of the Shakespearean period redefining what a play and what a playwright actually is
