

Systems of Judgment of Architectural Design

A Research Project Proposed
By Sami Hassid, * Associate Professor of Architecture
College of Environmental Design, University of California (Berkeley)

INTRODUCTION

This project represents an empirical approach to understanding the processes and principles governing the judgment of architectural design and their relation to their counterparts governing creative decisions. It is a phase of a research program on "Systems of Judgment of Architectural Design."

STATEMENT OF THE PROBLEM

One of the main conditions for the appreciation and judgment of an architectural work is an awareness of the process of its creation. Haziness surrounds at present the understanding of creative as well as evaluative processes and principles of architectural design. The relation between the two sets of processes and principles is even less well understood. The possibility of building a bridge between the two sets is conjectural. However, the resolution of this problem is important. In all these matters, research is needed to improve the understanding of, and hence the ability to judge, architectural works of art.

The problem proposed for investigation in this project is the correlation between the processes and principles governing design decisions on the one hand, and, on the other hand, those governing the critical evaluation of architectural works.

JUSTIFICATION OF THE PROJECT

Need for Criticism and Research in Architecture

The realization of the need for criticism in architecture has been steadily increasing. Recent literature abounds with calls for a basis for architectural criticism, or for a frame of reference on which such criticism can be based<sup>(1)</sup>. ** The dearth of trained critics of architecture is noticeable<sup>(2)</sup> and the lack of accepted criteria for criticism is deplorable<sup>(3)</sup>. Terms used in architectural criticism are characterized mainly by their

The Imperfect City: On Architectural Judgment Samir Younes, 2016-03-03 If architectural judgment were a city a city of ideas and forms then it is a very imperfect city When architects judge the success or failure of a building the range of ways and criteria which can be used for this evaluation causes many contentious and discordant arguments Proposing that the increase in number and intensity of such arguments threatens to destabilize the very grounds upon which judgment is supposed to rest this book examines architectural judgment in its historical cultural political and psychological dimensions and their convergence on that most expressive part of architecture namely architectural character It stresses the value of reasoned judgment in justifying architectural form a judgment based on three sets of criteria those criteria that are external to architecture those that are internal to architecture and those that pertain to the psychology of the architect as image maker External criteria include philosophies of history or theories of modernity internal criteria include architectural character and architectural composition while the psychological criteria pertain to mimetic rivalry or rivaling desires for the same architectural forms Yet although architectural conflicts can adversely influence judgment they can at the same time contribute to the advancement of architectural culture

Questioning Architectural Judgment Steven A. Moore, Barbara B. Wilson, 2013-07-24 The book shines light on the problem of judgment particularly in the realm of architectural technics and the codes that regulate it The struggle to define sustainability and thus judge architecture through such lenses is but one dimension of the contemporary problem of judgment By providing the reader with an inherently interdisciplinary study of a particular discipline architecture it brings to the topic lenses that challenge the too frequently unexamined assumptions of the discipline By situating architecture within a broader cultural field and using case studies to dissect the issues discussed the book emphasizes that it is not simply a matter of designing better more efficient or more stringent codes to guide place making but a matter of reconstructing the boundaries of the systems to be coded The authors are winners of the EDRA Place Research Award 2014 for their work on the Green Alley Demonstration Project used in the book

Architectural Judgement Peter Collins, 1971-01-01 Proposes using the intellectual techniques evolved by the legal profession to make architectural decisions

Questioning Architectural Judgment Steven A. Moore, Barbara Brown Wilson, 2014 There is a growing insecurity among practitioners and academics concerning how we should judge architecture through the aesthetic lenses of the canon as we have for centuries or through various quantitative measurements of performance that have emerged in the shadow of climate change over the last decade This book is not the first to observe that these two criteria for excellence appear to be in conflict It is however the first book to observe that the advocates of either side generally fail to recognize that both sets of criteria are socially constructed The purpose of this book is then to theorize on the basis of historical and empirical data a synthetic mode of judgment one that will neither compromise opposing standards nor simply state new standards to replace existing ones Rather this book provides practical and theoretical tools to empower a civil society discourse for remaking standards directed at the built environment in the 21st century The book shines light on the problem of judgment particularly in the realm of architectural technics and the codes that regulate it The struggle to define sustainability and thus judge architecture through such lenses is but one dimension of the contemporary problem of judgment By providing the reader with an inherently interdisciplinary study of a particular discipline architecture it brings to the topic lenses that challenge the too frequently unexamined assumptions of the discipline By situating architecture within a broader cultural field and using case studies to dissect the issues discussed the book emphasizes that it is not simply a matter of designing better more efficient or more stringent codes to guide place making but a matter of reconstructing the boundaries of the systems to be coded

Architecture Beyond Criticism Wolfgang F. E. Preiser, Aaron T. Davis, Ashraf M. Salama, Andrea Hardy, 2014-11-27 For the first time this book demonstrates that the two paradigms of architectural criticism and performance evaluation can not only co exist but complement each other in the assessment of built works As architecture takes more principled stances worldwide from environmental sustainability to social cultural and economic activism this book examines the roles of perceived and measured quality in architecture By exploring in tandem both subjective traditional architectural criticism and environmental design and performance evaluation and its objective evaluation criteria the book argues that both methodologies and outcomes can achieve a comprehensive assessment of quality in architecture Curated by a global editorial team the book includes Contributions from international architects and critics based in the UK USA Brazil France Qatar Egypt New Zealand China Japan and Germany Global case studies which illustrate both perspectives addressed by the book and comparative analyses of the findings A six part organization which includes introductions and conclusions from the editors to help guide the reader and further illuminate the contributions By presenting a systematic approach to assessing building performance design professionals will learn how to improve building design and performance with major stakeholders in mind especially end
