Culture in Chicago 1907-1917 author Moya Luckett uses the era's dominant political ideology as a lens to better understand its cinematic practice. Luckett argues that movies were a typically Progressive institution reflecting the period's investment in leisure, its more public lifestyle, and its fascination with celebrity. She uses Chicago, often considered the nation's most Progressive city and home to the nation's largest film audience by 1907, to explore how Progressivism shaped and influenced the address, reception, exhibition, representational strategies, regulation, and cultural status of early cinema. After a survey of Progressivism's general influences on popular culture and the film industry in particular, she examines the era's spectatorship theories in chapter 1 and then the formal characteristics of the early feature film, including the use of prologues, multiple diegesis, and oversight in chapter 2. In chapter 3, Luckett explores the period's cinema in the light of its celebrity culture, while she examines exhibition in chapter 4. She also looks at the formation of Chicago's censorship board in November 1907 in the context of efforts by city government, social reformers, and the local press to establish community standards for cinema in chapter 5. She completes the volume by exploring race and cinema in chapter 6 and national identity and community this time in relation to World War I in chapter 7. As well as offering a history of an underexplored area of film history, Luckett provides a conceptual framework to help navigate some of the period's key issues. Film scholars interested in the early years of American cinema will appreciate this insightful study.

Crowds a Moving-Picture of Democracy, Vol. 1 of 5 Gerald Stanley Lee, 2015-06-24 Excerpt from Crowds a Moving Picture of Democracy Vol 1 of 5 The best picture I know of my religion is Ludgate Hill as one sees it going down the foot of Fleet Street It would seem to many perhaps like a rather strange half heathen altar but it has in it the three things with which I worship most my Maker in this present world the three things which it would be the breath of religion to me to offer to a God together Cathedrals Crowds and Machines With the railway bridge reaching over all the little still locomotives in the din whispering across the street with the wide black crowd streaming up and streaming down and the big far away other worldly church above I am strangely glad It is like having a picture of ones whole world taken up deftly and done in miniature and hung up for one against the sky the white steam which is the breath of modern life the vast hurrying of our feet and that Great Finger pointing toward heaven day and night for us all I never tire of walking out a moment from my nook in Clifford s Inn and stealing a glimpse and coming back to my fireplace I sit still a moment before going to work and look in the flames and think The great roar outside the Court gathers it all up that huge boundless tiny summed up world out there flings it faintly against my quiet windows while I sit and think
