skin newsworthy in Victorian Britain It represents a unique contribution to the media history of the human body by delving into the cultural and historical underpinnings of wound representation in Western culture Employing a case study approach the book provides a comprehensive exploration of the interplay between dermatology and the Victorian press This work suggests that there was a mutually constitutive relationship between skin reporting and the formal evolution of news discourse during the nineteenth century Narratives related to skin such as wounds caused by corporal punishment plagues resulting from neglect in workhouses and occupational skin diseases emerged as defining features of Victorian newspapers Notably media coverage of wounded skin assumed a central rhetorical position in debates pertaining to discipline abuse poverty labour and social norms a legacy still discernible in contemporary journalism Analysing the mediation of the wounded body in Victorian Britain offers a unique insight into the foundations of modern journalism It sheds light on the impossibility of maintaining an objective framework when observing and reporting on bodies in pain Paradoxically news writers and commentators of that era navigated this challenge by encapsulating such narratives within rhetorical constructs that provided a template for the evolution of contemporary news values
