

Crusoe is a landmark collection by one of our best-known poets. It brings together poems from all of Mandel's earlier books, which have long been out of print; these include Trio, Fuseli Poems, Black and Secret Man, and An Idiot Joy which won a Governor-General's Award in 1967. Some of these poems have since been revised; Crusoe also contains some new poems whose simplicity and stark diction may startle readers.

The collection as a whole displays a most impressive talent, a passion for words with their ambiguities, their truths and lies, and a continuing exploration of the moral function of language. Mandel's imagination includes with dexterity and ease the entire range of human experience, from the mundane to the mythological and even the horrific.
