Appeasement and the Road to Munich 1938

We, the German Führer and the British Prime Minister, have had a meeting today and are agreed in the question of Anglo-German relations of first importance for the two continents of Europe.

We regard the agreement on the Anglo-German Naval Agreement as a step in the fulfilment of the desire of our two peoples to live in peace with one another again.

We are resolved that the future of Europe shall be the result of consultation with any other questions of common interest to the countries, and we are determined to remove possible
