Epidemiological Aspects of Cutaneous Malignant

Melanoma Richard P. Gallagher, J. Mark Elwood, 2012-12-06 Significant progress has been made in recent years in understanding the origins of cutaneous malignant melanoma Knowledge of the relationship between solar radiation and melanoma has changed and it now appears that both the character and timing of exposure may be more important than total cumulative dose in accounting for risk The melanoma sunlight model may prove an instructive heuristic exercise for environmental epidemiology as we currently tend to restrict ourselves to a search for uniform total dose response relationships between cancers and suspected environmental carcinogens The study of the relationship between acquired melanocytic nevi and melanoma has led to useful new information about predictors of melanoma risk and in addition has opened new perspectives on the development of nevi in children Definition of the factors for nevus development in children may lead to the possibility of primary prevention programs for melanoma in younger generations of children Recent new evidence suggests that certain occupational groups may be at elevated risk of melanoma A great deal of work is going into the study of ways of screening high risk populations in order to detect melanoma at its earliest stages when current treatment protocols are most effective The visibility of lesions on the skin challenges classical definitions of early detection and screening in epidemiology

Elder,George Francis Murphy,2010 In surgical pathology practice distinguishing malignant from benign melanocytic lesions represents one of the major problem areas Failure to diagnose a malignant melanoma can have catastrophic results but separating melanomas from their simulants is often difficult and over diagnosis of melanoma is also inappropriate This edition presents a comprehensive account of benign and malignant melanocytic lesions The benign lesions encompass the major simulants of melanoma In addition some of them such as dysplastic nevi have significance as markers of individuals at increased risk for the development of melanoma It has become ever more apparent especially with the recent advent of molecular classification that melanoma is not one disease and that prognosis in melanoma can vary considerably from lesions that present minimal risk to dangerous malignancies at opposite ends of a spectrum The details of therapy for these lesions are very different and are determined for the most part by their diagnostic and prognostic features as judged by microscopy This edition explains in detail the use of attributes for microstaging and for prediction of prognosis in melanoma including discussion of the latest AJCC staging system More importantly however it provides a richly illustrated roadmap for diagnosis of the entire spectrum of melanocytic tumours Discussion of the lesions is firmly grounded in their clinical significance with detailed descriptions of clinical features often accompanied by clinical images Lesions in general are illustrated in multiple microscopic images ranging from scanning magnification to high power Cytologic as well as architectural features are clearly delineated Pathophysiology epidemiology and molecular attributes are also discussed This work will serve as a comprehensive text for learning on the part of trainees and also as an invaluable diagnostic reference for more experienced diagnosticians in daily practice Malignant Melanoma Ferdy J.
