Speaking Culturally Gerry Philipsen, 1992-11-03

Speaking Culturally presents case studies of two cultures focusing on how speaking is thematized and enacted in each. The Teamsterville culture is drawn from the author's studies of the spoken life of an urban working class neighborhood in Chicago while the Nacirema culture draws upon studies of communication among middle class Americans primarily on the West Coast. Using fieldwork conducted over a period of twenty years Philipsen shows how listening to a people's spoken life can reveal expressions of underlying codes or social rhetorics of what it means to be a person how persons can and should be linked together in social relations and how communication can and should be used in interpersonal conduct. From these studies of speaking in two cultures emerges an understanding of communication as an activity in which people not only draw from and express but also shape and fashion their understandings of self society and strategic action.

Cross-culturally Speaking, Speaking Cross-culturally Christine Béal, Kerry Mullan, Bert Peeters, 2014-01-03 Did you know that to get a job in Australia it is important to use the right balance of informal and formal language during the interview? Did you know that student advising in Wu Chinese spoken around Shanghai is not a face threatening activity contrary to general perceptions about the nature of advice giving? Did you know that the use of minimal eye contact and flat intonation by Japanese speakers is interpreted by native English speakers as a lack of interest and willingness to communicate? Did you know that French and Australian English speakers show a surprising number of similarities in the way they use conversational humour in social visits? Think you know how to address your Italian lecturer or tutor? Think again. These are some of the findings arrived at in this exciting new collection of papers from an array of international scholars who represent different theoretical perspectives but who all study communicative behaviour across languages and cultures including English French Italian Japanese Russian and Wu Chinese. Adopting a comparative or cross cultural approach the majority of the contributions draw on authentic examples from a wide range of corpora including social visits among friends advising sessions involving recent high school graduates and or their parents simulated employment interviews and interactions involving second language learners Contributions of a pedagogical approach offer practical assistance to the cross cultural learner through a range of classroom activities These include a cross linguistic comparison of conceptual metaphors an applied ethnolinguistics framework and ethnographic critical cultural awareness and reflexivity exercises All of these activities are designed to equip the learner to study the communicative behaviours and cultural values of the target language This edited volume is an important contribution to the growing body of work dedicated to better understanding the linguistic and pragmatic aspects of cross cultural competence required for successful communication across cultural boundaries It will appeal to readers interested in linguistics interactional styles and communicative behaviour cross cultural pragmatics and intercultural communication
