

“Dick King-Smith was a genius for many generations, deciding to make a complete change and become a teacher, the very teacher in a primary school near Bath. He is married with three growing children and says that he would do his children's school. The Fox Brown is aimed for other granddads.”

By the same author:

THE FOX BROWN

“Happy books for children are rare. What volume does in The Fox Brown, a good, humorous story with sound characterization and an ability to be funny without undue reliance on ‘whimsicality’.” — Times Literary Supplement

“A sparkling read-up. The style is entirely a child's delight for its early original tale and the treatment just what which it is prepared and intended.” — Growing Point

ISBN 0 175 82747 1

Mrs. Besterling is horrified by the news that her best friend contains a dog—a wedding of a paper with strongly contrasting fat. But after the unfortunate escape from an early and spontaneous death at the hands of the Pigman, the dog assumes a unique and favored position in the class.

The author is convinced that the book's success has been given to him for some special purpose and in time she is proved right. With the help of Felicity the Mink, Frank and Frank the Kitten, Daggie not only becomes the only remaining dog in existence, but a class teacher's another highly unusual form of locomotion. Well, you might try!

The ingenious and amusing poem, by the author of The Fox Brown, is illustrated with lovely line drawings by the author's sister Mary Bester.
