A Barnsley Lad:

Ashley Jackson Chris Bond, 2010-01-30 Ashley Jackson has had an extremely distinctive and illustrious life in the world of art. Since opening his first gallery back in 1963 he has become one of the country's leading and most successful landscape watercolorists. His unique evocative and distinctive paintings of brooding moorlands have become synonymous with Yorkshire and more particular the moors above and around his Gallery situated in the heart of the Pennines Holmfirth. His works have been exhibited worldwide and adorn the walls of many successful and famous people from politicians to actors from Tsars to Princes. Ashley was honored when former US President Bill Clinton an avid art collector was presented with an original watercolor. Ashley throughout his career has always been an ambassador for the arts. He has strived through his life to encourage people not just to take up art but to appreciate the beauty of the landscape around us. His exhibitions have included Ashley Jackson One Man Exhibition at Patchings Artfarm Calverton Notts in 2003 and Ashley Jackson's Yorkshire Moors a love affair Victoria Quarter Leeds in 2002. He has also held exhibitions in New York Chicago and Milan. His awards include the 2006 Life Time Achievement Award from Yorkshire Awards and the 2007 Life Time Achievement Award from the Huddersfield Examiner. He is the present day Ambassador for Northernart. The local artist has done extensive charity work in the past and is part of the Prince's Trust.

Weekend in Dinlock Clancy Sigal, 2013-08-06 divDIVA soulful tour de force of the world of coal miners in Yorkshire a way of life like no other divDIV. In this psychologically astute novel set in the boisterous South Yorkshire mining town of Dinlock Davie a young miner paints to ease the mental and physical pain of digging coal on his knees two thousand feet underground. Sigal creates through Davie a microcosmic portrait of this backbreaking work performed by men dedicated to social change. In close detail Sigal illustrates their daily routines and surprising complexity from the mines to the pub and back home. divDIV Weekend in Dinlock offers an immersive account of the brutal work these miners endure and their life affirming sometimes violent ways of relaxing. This intensely realistic account recalls George Orwell and is illuminated by Sigal's ability to convey working class wit and a sympathetic yet brutalizing milieu placing the reader in the mind and soul of the coal miner. divDIV div div Jobsworth Malcolm

Philips, 2013-05-21 Malcolm Philips was a reluctant bureaucrat. When it was suggested that he give up selling ice cream and go to work for the council he protested that it would be full of jobsworths skivers and crawlers. Truth to tell however he quickly fitted in among what his boss described as all the other sods and buggers at County Hall. The 1960s and 1970s were the halcyon days of local government when rules and regulations multiplied at the expense of common sense and no one was entirely sure what the person in the next office actually did or even what purpose their own job served. In these Confessions Malcolm tells all his surreptitious visits to the girls in the typing pool the ingenious fiddles the arrival of flower power in the computer room the goings on in the roof space after the Christmas party and the mysterious expenses such as repairs to elephant. Some of the sods and buggers you'll meet in this book include Archie a master of foul language and never without a
