emotional tasks requiring highly skilled labor In her detailed examination of fifty young northern women s diaries during this time period the author shows that while this work entailed attempts at suppressing inappropriate feeling it also invited self consciousness and a sense of competence as these women addressed society s often contradictory expectations In a variety of settings emotion work was the means through which women constructed a fluid and negotiated self while their diaries provided a mirror and tool of this labor Showing work where none seemed to exist The Work of the Heart suggests emotion work as a key measure of women s status whether for the twenty first century or the eighteenth and offers an analytical tool for historians exploring the self
