Diary Of Victor Frankenstein:

The Diary of Victor Frankenstein Roscoe Cooper, 2001-05 One of the greatest of all forbidden pleasures is reading another person's journal. And when the writer is none other than Victor Frankenstein, the experience becomes mesmerizing. Here, written in his own hand, is the young medical student's account of his horrifying creation, a monster cobbled together from human flesh. Here are sketches of friends, family of the fiend, as well. And here too are letters, receipts, other documents from a promising life that devolves into nightmare. This imaginative volume, actually written by Cooper, illustrated by Ering, serves as a testament both to a unique, powerful vision and to the craft of bookmaking. The Secret Journal of Victor Frankenstein David Stewart, 2009-04 Although not quite a doctor, he certainly knew his gluteus maximus from his ginglymus. This journal contains Mr. Frankenstein's notes on the workings of the human body, from a heartbeat to the eardrum. It also features pages from his diary and newspaper cuttings. The Secret Laboratory Journals of Dr. Victor Frankenstein Jeremy Kay, 1995 A faux journal discusses the innermost thoughts, laboratory procedures, and scientific knowledge of the original mad scientist whose body-snatching exploits, search for the secret of life, and experiments in reanimation spawned an entire genre of horror fiction. The Frankenstein diaries Hubert Venables, 1976 The Frankenstein Diaries Hubert Venables, 1980 The diaries and papers of Viktor Frankenstein describe his scientific experiments, triumphs, professional isolation, and personal tragedy. Women's Diaries as Narrative in the Nineteenth-Century Novel Catherine Delafield, 2016-12-05 Using private diary writing as her model, Catherine Delafield investigates the cultural significance of nineteenth-century women's writing and reading practices. Beginning with an examination of non-fictional diaries and the practice of diary writing, she assesses the interaction between the fictional diary and other forms of literary production, such as epistolary narrative, the periodical, the factual document, and sensation fiction. The discrepancies between the private diary and its use as a narrative device are explored through the writings of Frances Burney, Elizabeth Gaskell, Anne Brontë, Dinah Craik, Wilkie Collins, and Bram Stoker. The ideological function of the diary, Delafield suggests, produces a conflict in fictional narrative between that diary's received use as a domestic and spiritual record and its authority as a life-writing opportunity for women. Delafield considers women as writers, readers, and subjects and contextualizes her analysis within nineteenth-century reading practice. She demonstrates ways in which women could become performers of their own story through a narrative method which was authorized by their femininity and at the same time allowed them to challenge the myth of domestic womanhood. What Would Frankenstein Do? Kensington Press, 2019-11-22 Notebook by Kensington Press.
