Across the River and Into the Trees is a novel by American writer Ernest Hemingway published by Charles Scribner's Sons in 1950 after first being serialized in Cosmopolitan magazine earlier that year. The title is derived from the last words of U.S. Civil War Confederate General Thomas J. Stonewall Jackson: "Let us cross over the river and rest under the shade of the trees." Hemingway's novel opens with Colonel Richard Cantwell, a 50-year-old US Army officer duck hunting in the Marano Lagoon on the Adriatic Coast between Venice and Trieste, Italy, at the close of World War II. It is revealed that Cantwell has a terminal heart condition and most of the novel takes the form of a lengthy flashback detailing his experiences in Italy during World War I through the days leading up to the duck hunt. The bulk of the narrative deals with his star-crossed romance of a Venetian woman named Renata who is over thirty years his junior. During a trip to Italy not long before writing the novel, Hemingway had met young Adriana Ivancich with whom he became infatuated and he used her as the model for the female character in the novel. The novel's central theme is death and more importantly how death is faced. One biographer and the critic sees a parallel between Hemingway's Across the River and Into the Trees and Thomas Mann's Death in Venice. The novel is built upon successive layers of symbolism and as in his other writing, Hemingway employs here his distinctive spare style, the iceberg theory where the substance lies below the surface of the plot. Hemingway described Across the River and into the Trees and one reader's reaction to it using Indian talk: "Book too much for him. The book starts slow then increase in pace till it becomes impossible to stand. I bring emotion up to where you can't stand it then we level off so we won't have to provide oxygen tents for the readers. Book is like engine. We have to slack her off gradually." Written in Italy, Cuba, and France in the late 1940s, it was the first of his novels to receive negative press and reviews. It was nonetheless a bestseller in America, spending 7 weeks at the top of The New York Times bestseller's list in 1950 and was in fact Hemingway's only novel to top the list. It met with an unenthusiastic critical reception; one critic, J. Donald Adams, writing in The New York Times describing it as one of the saddest books he had ever read, not because he was moved to compassion by the conjunction of love and death in the Colonel's life but because a great talent has come whether for now or forever to such a dead end The first chapter of Across the River and Into the Trees begins with a frame story depicting 50 year old Colonel Richard Cantwell duck hunting in the Marano Lagoon between Venice and Trieste in the present taking place during the closing days of World War II It is eventually revealed that Cantwell referred to throughout the book simply as Colonel has a terminal heart condition Beginning in the second chapter the book is presented primarily through a flashback narrative of the Colonel's experiences during both World Wars from his service in the Italian army during WWI to his time in the American Army ascending to General before being demoted to Colonel Hemingway provides a great detail in describing Italy from its landscape to its food and drink The primary narrative of the book focuses on the Colonel's romance with the 18 year old Venetian Renata whom he calls Daughter Renata is aware of the Colonel's terminal illness and the book details how both characters come to terms with the Colonel's impending death Many of the Colonel's wartime memories are revealed as stories he tells them to Renata who wants to share in his experiences The novel ends with Cantwell suffering a fatal series of heart attacks as he leaves Venice after the duck hunt on the same day as the book began Shortly before dying the Colonel recounts to
