Acting Learning And Change:

Acting, Learning and Change Jan Mandell, Jennifer Lynn Wolf, 2003 When adolescents create and act in their own plays something more than a production and performance results As Jan Mandell and Jennifer Wolf attest the power of the arts in learning can lead to a real passion for justice and the courage to question For teachers it can mean new ways of thinking about the gifts and talents of their students as learners and explicators of their own skills and knowledge This book documents what happened when Wolf traveled to Minnesota to observe and participate in Mandell s drama classes Quickly both began to dive into research to question more intensely what occurs in the classroom document the social nature of student learning and study teacher change and conditions of professional development Their focus is on how the accumulation and adaptation of knowledge takes place as students and teachers act together in their learning Mandell and Wolf offer a highly practical model of teacher research as well as a detailed method of performing arts education They include in every chapter academic essays classroom activities theatre exercises and interviews with students They supply more support in the appendixes an annotated bibliography sample lesson plans coaching statements research guidelines and more Teacher Change and Development Paula R. Villia, 2006 If the future of any society can be pinpointed it is with the teachers who help form the citizens of tomorrow Sometimes their impact is equal to the parents and sometimes surpasses it by not a small measure But how must teachers change to be sure that they move with the times and do not lose that role in society This book delves into this issue

Adult Education Patricia N. Blakely, Anna H. Tomlin, 2008 Adult education is the practice of teaching and educating adults This often happens in the workplace through extension or continuing education courses at secondary schools at a college or university Other learning places include folk high schools community colleges and lifelong learning centres The practice is also often referred to as Training and Development It has also been referred to as andragogy to distinguish it from pedagogy A difference is made between vocational education mostly undertaken in workplaces and frequently related to up skilling and non formal adult education including learning skills or learning for personal development Educating adults differs from educating children in several ways One of the most important differences is that adults have accumulated knowledge and experience that can add or hinder the learning experience This new book presents recent studies on this topic from several perspectives

The Laboratory Method of Changing and Learning Kenneth Dean Benne, 1975

Informed Treatment Nancy Britton Soth, 1997-01-23 Informed Treatment is a narrative bibliography that examines the most effective writing in book and periodical literature about inpatient hospitalization and residential treatment Bringing together writings scattered through areas such as psychiatry psychology sociology nursing and inpatient settings throughout the world it examines the concepts treatment models and culture of inpatient settings provides ways to organize milieu treatment and demonstrates how diagnosis must influence treatment Informed Treatment analyzes effective techniques used in inpatient settings and gives new recognition to the emerging role of the patient's family in psychiatric treatment. The book considers all aspects of the treatment environment: the physical setting, the symbolic meaning of the environment, the ward atmosphere, partial hospitalization, and does not neglect the adjustments necessary for short-term treatment. A remarkable book for making difficult concepts and techniques clear.

Informed Treatment promises to become the reference tool for staff development in any institution serving psychiatric patients.

A Teaching Artist at Work Barbara McKean, 2006. The works presented are moving and impressive; their authenticity and tone in harmony with the storyteller's voice. The story itself may open new windows for those intent on enriching and humanizing what occurs in contemporary schools.

Maxine Greene: A fabulous book for arts and theater education.

Merryl Goldberg: Author of Integrating the Arts, Third Edition. Are you a theatre teaching artist or considering it? No matter what kind of educational setting you're in, the theatre skills you teach are intimately linked to your own artistry; you've got to know how to teach from your own practice while you learn to practice the art of teaching. The key is discovering how the educational setting, the students, and the stage link.

A Teaching Artist at Work helps theatre teaching artists develop connections between their pedagogical and artistic selves. The book presents a framework for thinking about the work of teaching artists in general and theatre teaching artists in particular. Through descriptive examinations of practice, the book also provides theatre teaching artists and those who prepare and work beside them with concrete examples of three theatre education projects in three different educational settings, as well as the collaborative processes that helped them succeed. Replicable in other settings such as community outreach programs, after-school, and summer programs hosted by professional theatres and not-for-profit educational theatres, these projects provide a jumping-off point for others who work to create interesting theatre curriculum. In any educational setting, theatre teaching artists create spaces where teachers and students can envision a new, different, and exciting way of learning and doing that they can apply to theatre education and many other content areas. With emphasis on linking personal artistry with pedagogical artistry and examples drawn from McKean's own practice, A Teaching Artist at Work is an invaluable resource for teaching artists and the arts education community.
