Activities For Older People:

Extreme Weather Events and Vulnerability of Older People Md Isahaque Ali, Dharmalingam Arunachalam, Helen Forbes-Mewett, 2026-01-01 This book examines the critical intersection of demographic ageing and climate change in Bangladesh including comparison with other Asia countries Located in the dynamic delta system of Southeast Asia Bangladesh is constantly exposed to extreme weather events the frequency and intensity of which are exacerbated by climate change Although these disasters affect the entire population this book argues that older people are at a distinct and disproportionate risk due to their reduced ability to adapt to severe climate related shocks Drawing on extensive qualitative field research the book provides a detailed account of the vulnerability of older adults in a coastal sub district in Bangladesh The analysis draws on in depth interviews with older men and women whose narratives provide a powerful perspective on life before during and after catastrophic weather events These accounts reveal an ongoing cycle of vulnerability in which cyclones and floods not only destroy material assets such as homes and livelihoods but also cause profound physical and psychological trauma The resulting disruption of social support networks loss of income and forced migration to survive further exacerbate their insecurity The study identifies several major causes of vulnerability including the geophysical exposure of the coastal region the prevalence of non resilient housing profound income insecurity and a high degree of dependence on family support systems The analysis carefully distinguishes between formal state initiatives such as the Old Age Allowance and informal support systems rooted in community and kinship It shows how formal programmes can strengthen financial stability and ensure access to essentials while informal networks provide immediate support and practical assistance in the aftermath of a disaster By synthesising the concepts of exposure sensitivity and adaptation this book offers evidence based insights into one of the critical challenges of our time The findings and recommendations are essential for researchers policy makers and practitioners in the fields of gerontology disaster management and climate adaptation and are an important resource for efforts to protect vulnerable older populations in Bangladesh and other climate affected regions around the world in particular in other Asian countries

Perspectives on Human-Computer Interaction Research with Older People Sergio Sayago, 2019-02-20 This book promotes a critical reflection about the research conducted so far in Human Computer Interaction HCI with older people whose predominant perspective focuses on decline health and help It introduces a new or different perspective which is grounded in interdisciplinary research on older people and digital technologies Key elements are to i address topics that include but also go beyond decline health and help such as leisure fun creativity and culture to delve more deeply into the role of digital technologies in multiple facets of older people s lives ii focus on doing research and designing technologies with and for older adults and their communities to avoid and fight against negative social conceptions of ageing and iii examine older people s life course strengths interests and values as well as their limitations and needs to design technologies that not only help but also empower them extending their
