Lessons on Early Church History Deborah Alcock,1879

Acts Jet Witherspoon,1972-01 The Acts of the Early Church Councils Thomas Graumann,2021 The present study examines the acts of ancient church councils as the objects of textual practices in their editorial shaping and in their material conditions The book analyses the purposes and expectations governing and inscribed into the use and creation of these acts It traces the processes of their production starting from the recording of spoken interventions during a meeting to the preparation of minutes of individual sessions to their collection into larger units their storage and the earliest attempts at their dissemination. It contends that the preparation of paperwork is central to the work of a council and much of its effectiveness resides in the relevant textual and bureaucratic processes. As council leaders and administrators paid careful attention to the creation of a proper record suited to their requirements, they also scrutinized documents and records of previous occasions with equal attention and inspected document features meant to assure and project validity and authority. From the evidence of such examinations, the study further reconstructs the textual and physical characteristics of ancient conciliar documents and the criteria of their assessment. Papyrological evidence and contemporary legal regulations are used to contextualize these efforts. The book seeks to demonstrate that scholarly attention to the production processes, character, and material conditions of council acts is essential to their understanding and to any historical and theological research into the councils of the ancient church.
