After The First Rain:

Technical Bulletin, 1967 Seed Germination in Desert Plants Yitzchak Gutterman, 2012-12-06 During germination the most resistant stage of the life cycle the seed changes to the most sensitive stage namely the seedling Therefore in desert plant species seed dispersal and subsequent germination in the optimum time and place are particularly critical parameters Discussed here are the ways and means by which desert plants have adapted through the course of evolution to their extreme environment Two such strategies which have evolved are a plants with relatively large and protected seeds which germinate when the chance of seedling survival is high and the risk relatively low or b those with an opportunistic strategy minute seeds which germinate after low rainfall under high risk for seedling survival if additional rain does not follow Most species adopt a combination of the two mechanisms Species have adapted both genotypically and phenotypically both aspects of which are also discussed in this thorough text The reader is provided with a good understanding of the complex influences on each seed traced through from initial development to germination stage regarding germination preparation and subsequent survival The Negev Michael Evenari, Leslie Shanan, Naphtali Tadmor, 1982 The Negev first published over a decade ago told the story of some twenty years of study of southern Israel's desert It synthesized the findings of botanists geologists soil scientists agronomists archaeologists historians and engineers and told how the applications of their work produced an agricultural surplus in this forbiddingly dry hot region Now Michael Evenari has amplified the book with data from another decade of work He describes the efforts at a new farm at Wadi Mashash extends the weather data another ten years presents further work on the adaptations of plants and animals to desert conditions and takes a much deeper look at the historical precedents for the method of runoff agriculture which has made the desert bloom

Rosemary Grant, Peter R. Grant, 1989-11-14 The result of one of the most detailed and careful examinations of the behavior and ecology of a vertebrate ever conducted in the wild this study addresses one of the major questions in evolutionary biology why do some populations vary so much in morphological ecological behavioral and physiological traits By documenting the full range of variation within one population of a species and investigating the causal factors Rosemary and Peter Grant provide impressive evidence that species are capable of evolutionary change within observable periods of time Among the most dramatic examples of recent speciation and adaptive diversification are Darwin's Finches which live in the Galapagos Islands Darwin theorized that these closely related birds had evolved from a common ancestor to fill the available ecological niches on this remote archipelago Not only have they evolved into thirteen species but more recent study has shown that many of them exhibit striking variation in beak structure and other traits For more than a decade the Grants have studied one of these species the large cactus finch on the isolated Isla Genovesa They present information on the environment and demographic features of the population then discuss the range of genetic ecological and behavioral factors responsible for the unusually large morphological variation They place the large cactus finch in its community setting to better understand its evolution and conclude by discussing the implications of the study for the genetic structure of small populations and the problems of conserving them They illustrate their findings with an array of drawings tables and photographs

Regeneration of Plants in Arid Ecosystems Resulting from Patch Disturbance Yitzchak Gutterman, 2013-03-14 The main subject of this book is the interaction between diggings created by porcupines when consuming geophytes and their influences on annual and perennial vegetation in a desert biome The accumulation of run off water in diggings and depressions made by animals increases the carrying capacity of these microhabitats in the desert biome The accumulation of run off water does not only benefit the natural vegetation a system of human made depressions can be evolved to increase the catchment of the run off water that is typical to many desert habitats and can lead to run off agriculture in such areas This book will be of interest to anyone working in the fields of development of deserts from the ecological point of view water resources soil protection and erosion plant ecophysiology and settlement and agronomy It will be helpful to students researchers teachers and anyone interested in any of these areas

Water Flow In Soils Tsuyoshi Miyazaki, 2005-07-28 The new edition of a bestseller Water Flow in Soils bridges the fields of soil physics where descriptions of water flow tend to be microscopic and hydrology where they tend to be macroscopic Unlike other physics laden texts this work conveys the fundamental concepts of water flow in soils with clear and essentially nonmathematical explanation
