Ageing Independence And The Life Course:

Ageing, Independence, and the Life Course Sara Arber, Maria Evandrou, 1993 It is impossible in a short review to do justice to all those individual contributions most of which are interesting in their own right Whilst this book is likely to be of particular interest to gerontologists looking for recent developments in approaches to ageing many of the chapters also address policy issues related to care housing and social security Social Policy The book merits detailed study and should send ripples if not waves in a variety of directions The wide range of topics that are covered should ensure that the papers will be of considerable value to those who are eclectic in their interests as well as to those whose specialised interests are included among the wide range of topics There is an excellent bibliography and a very good index Baseline The editors take a refreshing view of older people I found it difficult to put this book down Each chapter is thoroughly researched and well written The numerous tables and graphs are clearly explained and discussed Altogether there is a cohesion in this work that is not always found in compilations As a reference book for all those concerned with the well being of older people administrators social workers nurses doctors and others this is a book which is well worth purchasing Geriaction This excellent book acts as a salutary antidote to the narrow and limited study of old age well disciplined clear cut presentation deserves wide recognition Age and Ageing This is a very interesting book I certainly recommend this book and would strongly encourage this book to be included as one of the essential reference book to clinical psychology training courses and sections of psychology services for older adults Newsletter of the Psychologists Special Interest Group for the Elderly Here again is a significant book researching and reflecting on every aspect of life Quarterly Journal of the Christian Council on Ageing a useful insight into the diversity of ageing experiences Nursing Times Ageing is a major policy issue not only because of the increases in the size of the elderly population but also due to the changes in the provision of community care Using a life course approach which emphasises the importance of recognising the effects of different life experiences on different groups of individuals and the interlinkage between phases of the life course the book explores the ways in which bases of structural advantage and disadvantage such as housing social class ethnicity health and disability have cumulative impacts on the situation of older people This sociological analysis of later life focuses on three issues Independence the concept of autonomy and importance the elderly attachment to these Perceptions of ageing how they vary according to different life course Social structural constraints associated with the material resources of older people the policy implications of adopting a life course perspective Transitions and the Lifecourse Amanda Grenier, 2012-01-31 Transitions and the life course Challenging the constructions of growing old explores and challenges dominant interpretations of transitions as they relate to ageing and the life course It takes a unique perspective that draws together ideas about late life as expressed in social policy and socio cultural constructs of age with lived experience The book is aimed at academics and students interested in social gerontology policy studies in health and social care and older people s accounts of experience , Handbook of

Communication and Aging Research Jon F. Nussbaum, Justine Coupland, 2004-04-12 This second edition of the Handbook of Communication and Aging Research captures the ever changing and expanding domain of aging research Since it was first recognized that there is more to social aging than demography gerontology has needed a communication perspective Like the first edition this handbook sets out to demonstrate that aging is not only an individual process but an interactive one The study of communication can lead to an understanding of what it means to grow old We may age physiologically and chronologically but our social aging how we behave as social actors toward others and even how we align ourselves with or come to understand the signs of difference or change as we age are phenomena achieved primarily through communication experiences Synthesizing the vast amount of research that has been published on communication and aging in numerous international outlets over the last three decades the book's contributors include scholars from North America and the United Kingdom who are active researchers in the perspectives covered in their particular chapter Many of the chapters work to deny earlier images of aging as involving normative decrement to provide a picture of aging as a process of development involving positive choices and providing new opportunities A recurring theme in many chapters is that of the heterogeneity of the group of people who are variously categorized as older aged elderly or over 65 The contributors review the literature analytically in a way that reveals not only current theoretical and methodological approaches to communication and aging research but also sets the future agenda This handbook will be of great interest to scholars and researchers in gerontology developmental psychology and communication and in this updated edition will continue to play a key role in the study of communication and aging

New Agendas for Women S. Walby, 1999-05-24 An excellent book addressing the dilemmas in the new policy agendas for women and government Gender relations are being transformed and a new gender settlement is being created The challenge to ensure the social inclusion of women within this new settlement is complicated by the diversity in women's lives in particular between those who are qualified and able to engage in employment and those who are not This wide ranging book is written by leading academics who have advised key members of the Labour Party

Home Ownership J. F. Doling, Marja Elsinga, 2006 Home ownership sectors in most European countries have grown in size Whatever assets European households have acquired in recent decades real estate appears to form a significant element in wealth portfolios Frequently national governments have been active in promoting the shift in tenure balance The general question pursued in this book is about the gains and losses accruing to individual households by virtue of their position as home owners The focus here is on financial gains and losses It also concerns the losses in the form of repayment risk related to difficulties that some households may experience in meeting housing loan repayment schedules The immediate background to this volume is the conference Housing in Europe New Challenges and Innovations in Tomorrow's Cities held in Reykjavik Iceland Hosted by the Urban Studies Institute of the University of Iceland and Centre for Housing and Property Research Bifrost School of Business it was held under the auspices of the European Network of Housing Researchers

Critical Approaches to Ageing and Later Life Anne Jamieson, Sarah Harper, Christina R. Victor, 1997 With contributions from some of the leading figures in the field this volume discusses the latest theoretical developments concerning the study and research of ageing

Realising Participation Kathryn Roberts, Tom Chapman, 2017-10-05 This title was first published in 2001 During the last twenty years government rhetoric in the UK has increasingly advocated that statutory health and social care services should regard and treat recipients as consumers in the same way as companies and organizations in the private sector This involves a considerable cultural change on the part of both service providers and their clients and this timely study explores the extent to which such a cultural change is actually taking place in British society The utilization of welfare services by a sample of people aged 70 and above on discharge from inpatient care and in a short period afterwards is examined as a critical testbed for key components of consumerism including participation representation access choice information and redress The book explores not only the extent to which opportunities are being provided for users to play an active role in their care but also their degree of willingness to assume such a role By investigating the experiences of clients from a generation which might be considered relatively resistant to a more active participation in health and social care the study offers an important insight into the extent to which a real social transformation is indeed taking place in the British welfare services

Home Ownership. Getting In, Getting From, Getting Out. Part II J. Doling, M. Elsinga, 2006-06-29 Home ownership sectors in most European countries have grown in size Whatever assets European households have acquired in recent decades real estate appears to form a significant element in wealth portfolios Frequently national governments have been active in promoting the shift in tenure balance The general question pursued in this book is about the gains and losses accruing to individual households by virtue of their position as home owners The focus here is on financial gains and losses It also concerns the losses in the form of repayment risk related to difficulties that some households may experience in meeting housing loan repayment schedules The immediate background to this volume is the Conference Housing in Europe New Challenges and Innovations in Tomorrow's Cities held in Reykjavik Iceland Hosted by the Urban Studies Institute of the University of Iceland and Centre for Housing and Property Research Bifr st School of Business it was held under the auspices of the European Network of Housing Researchers
