Cardinal Choices ,2000-09 This book is a history of the complex relations between scientific advisors primarily physicists and U S presidents in their role as decision makers about nuclear weapons and military strategy The story unsurprisingly is one of considerable tension between the experts and the politicians as scientists seek to influence policy and presidents alternate between accepting their advice and resisting or even ignoring it First published in 1992 the book has been brought up to date to include the experiences of science advisors to President Clinton In addition the texts of eleven crucial documents from the Einstein Szilard letter to President Roosevelt 1939 to the announcement of the Strategic Defense Initiative by President Reagan 1983 have been added as appendixes

The Politics of Expertise in Congress Bruce Bimber,1996-08-08

CHOICE 1997 Outstanding Academic Books Nowhere in the U S government is the marriage between expertise and politics more normatively troublesome and empirically obscure than in Congress The legislature is asked to be both expert and representative to act on the best available information and judgment about policy problems while being responsive to and reflective of constituents demands This book examines the relationship between technical experts and elected officials challenging the prevailing view about how experts become politicized by the policy process Bimber presents a theory about the connections between institutional structure and the strategies of experts who participate in politics He tests this theory by tracing the interaction between Congress and the Office of Technology Assessment OTA a recently abolished legislative branch agency created in 1972 to estimate the consequences of new technologies and free Congress from complete dependence on the executive branch for information and policy analysis In addition he provides comparative portraits of Congress s remaining support agencies the Congressional Budget Office the Congressional Research Office and the General Accounting Office and argues that the legislative context for the politics of expertise reveals patterns that have been overlooked in studies of expert knowledge and executive branch policymaking

Arguments that Count Rebecca Slayton,2023-10-31 How differing assessments of risk by physicists and computer scientists have influenced public debate over nuclear defense In a rapidly changing world we rely upon experts to assess the promise and risks of new technology But how do these experts make sense of a highly uncertain future In Arguments that Count Rebecca Slayton offers an important new perspective Drawing on new historical documents and interviews as well as perspectives in science and technology studies she provides an original account of how scientists came to terms with the unprecedented threat of nuclear armed intercontinental ballistic missiles ICBMs She compares how two different professional communities physicists and computer scientists constructed arguments about the risks of missile defense and how these arguments changed over time Slayton shows that our understanding of technological risks is shaped by disciplinary repertoires the codified knowledge and mathematical rules that experts use to frame new challenges And significantly a new repertoire can bring long neglected risks into clear view In the 1950s scientists recognized that high speed computers would be needed to cope with the unprecedented speed of ICBMs But the nation s elite science advisors had no way to analyze the risks of computers so used physics to assess what they could radar and missile performance Only decades later after establishing computing as a science were advisors able to analyze authoritatively the risks associated with complex software most notably the risk of a catastrophic failure As we continue to confront new threats including that of cyber attack Slayton offers valuable insight into how different kinds of expertise can limit or expand our capacity to address novel technological risks Annual Report Twentieth Century Fund,1994 Technology and Culture ,1993
