

What Are Behaviours That Challenge?

Behaviours that challenge refers to actions that are difficult for services, carers, or communities to understand and manage effectively, often because they may seem disruptive, harmful, or socially inappropriate. These behaviours are viewed not as character flaws or deliberate defiance, but as forms of communication expressing unmet needs, distress, or difficulty coping with environmental factors. The term emphasises that the challenge lies in our ability to understand and respond appropriately, rather than blaming the individual for their actions.
