African Armies Evolution And Capabilities:

African Armies Bruce E. Arlinghaus, 2019-03-04 African armies have undergone significant changes since African nations won independence from colonial rule. Once mainly small constabulary forces relegated to the maintenance of internal order, these armies have become larger, more modern institutions largely in response to growing external security threats. Previous analyses have focused on African military units as political actors with little or no attention paid to their actual abilities and desires to perform defense functions. This study examines the evolution of African armed forces, their impact on the societies in which they operate, and their current capabilities, with special attention to their effectiveness as military institutions.

The Handbook of African Defence and Armed Forces Evert Kleynhans, Marco Wyss, 2025-03-01 The Handbook of African Defence and Armed Forces provides the first in depth and multifaceted analysis of the evolution and current state of national defence policies, strategies, doctrines, capabilities, security challenges, and strategic responses of African states and their armed forces. Geographically, these aspects are investigated at the national, sub-regional, and regional levels. Chronologically, they are analysed against the backdrop of the superpower withdrawal from the continent in the 1990s and the so-called New Scramble for Africa, which has seen a crescendo of renewed great power interest in the continent's resources, as well as its strategic role, location, and relevance since the 2000s. The book takes a bottom-up and African-centric approach and is organized around five key themes: i) the differing security outlooks and defence policies of African powers within the region and the different sub-regions; ii) the strategies, doctrines, transformation, and employment of African armed forces; iii) the relationship between African armed forces with sub-regional, regional, and international organizations; iv) the challenges that African states and their armed forces have been facing and their strategic responses; and v) the position of African perspectives and agency in the context of continental and international security and defence. Understanding African security and defence, especially in terms of each individual nation's ability to contribute to peacekeeping operations, counterterrorism, border security, and internal security, requires a focus on the national level of armed forces and defence policies. This, in turn, sheds light on sub-regional and regional divergences, challenges, and cooperation. Based on this framework, the chapters in this volume offer comprehensive African perspectives on African and international security and defence, and in doing so, show the agency of the continent's countries and armed forces in International Security and Relations.

Defence Policy of Nigeria: Capability and Context Charles Quarker Dokubo, Celestine Oyom Bassey, 2011-01-20 This Reader provides a structurally coherent explanation and review of the magnified role conception and organizational task expansion for the Nigerian military establishment in foreign policy. It argues essentially that one of the most problematic and intractable areas of public policy in Nigeria since the Civil War concerns the development of a professional defence establishment adequate to meet the challenges arising from the altered parameters of our security environment. The correction of this condition is the primary motivation of the Armed Forces modernization and augmentation.

program that touches upon all elements of Nigeria's military power. This Reader is at once a review and a critique of the major facets of this modernization and augmentation process of the Nigerian armed forces within the operative context of the changing dimension of threat perception and the strategic parameters that have guided Nigerian military planning since the Civil War in 1970.

The 1964 Army Mutinies and the Making of Modern East Africa Timothy Parsons, 2003-03-30. This book provides a new concept framework for understanding the factors that lead soldiers to challenge civil authority in developing nations. By exploring the causes and effects of the 1964 East African army mutinies, it provides novel insights into the nature of institutional violence, aggression, and military unrest in former colonial societies. The study integrates history and the social sciences by using detailed empirical data on the soldiers' protests in Tanganyika, Uganda, and Kenya. The roots of the 1964 army mutinies in Tanganyika, Uganda, and Kenya were firmly rooted in the colonial past when economic and strategic necessity forced the former British territorial governments to rely on Africans for defense and internal security. As the only group in colonial society with access to weapons and military training, the African soldiery was a potential threat to the security of British rule. Colonial authorities maintained control over African soldiers by balancing the significant rewards of military service with social isolation, harsh discipline, and close political surveillance. After independence, civilian pay levels outpaced army wages, thereby tarnishing the prestige of military service. As compensation, veteran African soldiers expected commissions and improved terms of service when the new governments Africanized the civil service. They grew increasingly upset when African politicians proved unwilling and unable to meet their demands. Yet the creation of new democratic societies removed most of the restrictive regulations that had disciplined colonial African soldiers. Lacking the financial resources and military expertise to create new armies, the independent African governments had to retain the basic structure and character of the inherited armies. Soldiers in Tanganyika, Uganda, and Kenya mutinied in rapid succession during the last week of January 1964 because their governments could no longer maintain the delicate balance of coercion and concessions that had kept the colonial soldiery in check. The East African mutinies demonstrate that the propensity of an African army to challenge civil authority was directly tied to its degree of integration into postcolonial society.

Military and the Making of Modern South Africa Annette Seegers, 1996-12-31. Managing African Conflicts Louis Du

Plessis, Michael Hough, 2000 In the last years of the twentieth century military interventions by states in the conflicts occurring in other countries dominated television news on Africa Military units from Nigeria or Gambia Ghana or Guinea were patrolling the streets of Monrovia the capital of Liberia Armoured vehicles from South Africa and Botswana lumbered up and down the main streets of Lesotho s capital Maseru Soldiers from Zimbabwe and Angola assisted those from the Democratic Republic of Congo DRC to defend the Congolese capital against rebel insurgents supported by Ugandan Rwandan and Burundian forces Those who observed the camouflaged uniforms and wished to understand something more of these events were inevitably puzzled by many questions Some of these questions were Why are the armed forces of so many African states intervening in the domestic affairs of their neighbours What are these armed forces actually doing on foreign soil Why are so many African conflicts continuing from year to year thereby inevitably inviting and attracting intervention And finally what kinds of theoretical and legal conceptual frameworks will help observers understand the nature of such military interventions

To Sheathe the Sword John P. Lovell, David E. Albright, 1997-01-28 This important new volume sponsored by the Indiana Center on Global Change and World Peace brings together academicians and practitioners in comparative politics and international relations to examine the impact of civil military relations on the process of democratization Contributors take an unprecedented look at current and emerging patterns of linkages between civil military relations and democratization especially in areas which have embarked on the path of democratization since the 1980s They also challenge or refine many of the concepts and models that have figured prominently in discussions of civil military relations and democratization These include the notion that democratization requires adoption of the traditional Western model of civil military relations
