Jackson, 2013 In an effort to accentuate the need for Black Psychological theory research and methodology within the field of Africology Africana professor Dr DeReef Jamison argues that in order to gain a full understanding of the African American experience Africana scholars must consider the importance of Black Psychology as it relates to their work In his article entitled Through the Prism of Black Psychology A Critical review of Conceptual and Methodological Issues in Africology as seen through the Paradigmatic Lens of Black Psychology he notes that while Black Psychology is identified as a core component of Black Studies few programs include such courses within their curricula He further suggests that the goal within Black Psychology of examining the impact of African Americans historical experiences on their psyche speaks to the primary goal of Black Studies Thus the empirical nature of Black Psychology utilized to understand the African American psychological experience can have tremendous implications for the field of Black studies Through an overview of the field of Black Studies its core curriculum select graduate programs and the field of Black Psychology this paper will extend Dr Jamison s arguments by suggesting that African Centered psychology specifically needs to be central in the field of Black studies While Black Psychology empirically addresses the African American psyche considering African American historical experiences it is the African Worldview analytical approach which is central to African Centered psychological theory and methodology and provides a culturally specific analysis which is critical to the Black Studies intellectual pursuit Psychology of Blacks Thomas A Parham, Adisa Ajamu, Joseph L. White, 2015-10-14 For courses in Introduction to Psychology African American Psychology African American Studies Multicultural Counseling and Cross Cultural Counseling and Psychotherapy This text highlights the limitations of traditional psychological theories and approaches when applied to people of African descent It provides information on how the African Centered Perspective is defined as well as how it operates in the context of the

The Evolution of African-centered Psychologists , 2001 African centered psychologists adhere to an African Black psychology reflective of an African worldview The existence of African psychology is associated with an evolution in both conceptual development of an African psychology Akbar 1991 Jackson 1979 Nobles 1986x and an emerging African consciousness Akbar 1991 Jackson 1979 Karenga 1993 Nobles 1986 Utilizing qualitative study and phenomenological inquiry in the broadest sense this study explored the relevance of culture society training and professional experience in the developmental process of becoming African centered and to the phenomenon of African psychology It includes the history of African black psychology appropriate definitions of relevant terminology and discussion of three models of identity development The study is centered on the experiences of twelve African centered psychologists their interpretations of phenomenon associated with the development of an African centered perspective and its connection with the quest to develop a psychology which addresses needs that fall beyond the parameters of traditional psychology Using a semi structured interview protocol the participants were queried about the experiences that influenced the development of their African consciousness and the conceptual development of African psychology their experience with racism and the impact of racism on their conceptual development their perceptions of the barriers that interfere with implementation of African based psychology and the experiences that reinforced their African consciousness Participants offered consistent definitions of African centered thought however differences existed in operationalization of the concept The study found that the intergenerational transmission and felt experience of African culture African history black organizations and mentors significantly influenced the participant s African consciousness and the conceptual development of an African psychology It also found that internalization and focus on racism impeded African consciousness and limited conceptualization to Western based analysis Reconnection with African culture and spirituality were experiences familiar to all of the study s participants In summary the study is about African centered psychologists and their quest to provide an operational concept consistent with the history and culture of African Americans that would bring to the practice of psychology a more practical approach to help remedy psychologically based problems among African Americans

Radebe,Mogobe B. Ramose ,2023-06-28 African knowledge is yet to fully contribute to spaces of learning because of the disciplinary boundaries founded on Western separatist logic From an African epistemology knowledge is interconnected because of the cosmological understanding that the universe is one entity Bringing African knowledge into the academy requires a concerted effort to bring it of its own accord There have been commendable efforts by scholars in South Africa to bring African knowledge to higher education in ways that do not alter or re shape this knowledge to suit the dominant Euro American script This book aims to showcase such efforts This book makes interconnections of themes across disciplines The content produced in this book will ensure that literature will anchor the noble efforts to build African universities that deliberately centre African ways of knowing This book will be among the few publications that focus on Africanisation and decolonisation of knowledges as praxis We anticipate that this book will be recommended in various disciplines of social sciences in South African universities

The SAGE Encyclopedia of African Cultural Heritage in North America Mwalimu J. Shujaa, Kenya J. Shujaa, 2015-07-13 The Encyclopedia of African Cultural Heritage in North America provides an accessible ready reference on the retention and continuity of African culture within the United States Our conceptual framework holds first that culture is a form of self knowledge and knowledge about self in the world as transmitted from one person to another Second that African people continuously create their own cultural history as they move through time and space Third that African descended people living outside of Africa are also contributors to and participate in the creation of African cultural history Entries focus on illuminating Africanisms cultural retentions traceable to an African origin and cultural continuities ongoing practices and processes through which African culture continues to be created and formed Thus the focus is more culturally specific and less concerned with the broader transatlantic demographic political and geographic issues that are the focus of similar recent reference works We also focus less on biographies of individuals and political and economic ties and more on processes and manifestations of African cultural heritage and continuity
