After The Fireworks A Life Of David Ballantyne:

After the Fireworks Bryan Reid, 2004 David Ballantyne's life as a New Zealand writer brought him little more than disappointment, despair, and an urge to self-destruction by alcohol. Yet at least two of his novels can be regarded as New Zealand classics. At 23 he was the earliest of the new young post-war New Zealand writers to have his first novel published, not in New Zealand but in the United States. The Cunninghams, an uncompromisingly realistic portrait of New Zealand working-class life, was praised by American critics but greeted almost with shock in his own country. He did not publish another novel until 15 years later, and it was another five years before his best work, Sydney Bridge Upside Down, appeared, but most undeservedly attracted little attention. This lack of recognition and the feeling that he was a one-book writer eventually plunged him into the depths of alcoholism. Miraculously, he recovered in 1973 and went on to write two more novels and to achieve distinction as a kind of literary elder statesman. Whatever his disappointments as a writer of fiction, Ballantyne in his parallel career as a highly talented journalist earned professional admiration and respect both in New Zealand and the United Kingdom, where he had considerable success also as a writer of television plays. Letters of Frank Sargeson Sarah Shieff, 2012-02-03 A rich and riveting record of both literary and social value. Frank Sargeson is one of New Zealand's best-loved and most important writers. Besides the ground-breaking short stories he wrote, memoirs, novels, and plays, he encouraged at least three generations of younger writers, and for most of his adult life the famous back behind the hedge at 14 Esmonde Road was at the heart of New Zealand's artistic and literary world. Sargeson was also a prolific letter-writer, and this selection of 500 of the most fascinating ranges over half a century from 1927 to 1981. The letters are immensely readable, vividly capturing his life and times, his milieu, and his personality. Frank loved gossip, could be bitchy and peevish, but also kind, affectionate, funny, ribald, astute. This collection, selected, edited, and annotated by Sarah Shieff, is a document of extraordinary significance for all those interested in New Zealand's literary and social history.

Historical Dictionary of New Zealand Janine Hayward, Richard Shaw, Lara Greaves, Claire Timperley, 2024-11-19 Historical Dictionary of New Zealand Fourth Edition contains a chronology, an introduction, and an extensive bibliography.
