Against The Sea:

California Against the Sea Rosanna Xia, 2024-09-24 Now in paperback a deeply researched and reported San Francisco Chronicle exploration of sea level rise in California that breathes exquisite detail and dialogue Science Magazine into the subject Viscerally urgent thoroughly reported and compellingly written a must read for our uncertain times Ed Yong author of An Immense World When do seawalls make sense And when is it better to give in to the tides In California Against the Sea Xia writes about the difficult realities of trying to incorporate fairness into our tally of costs and benefits The New Yorker Along California's 1 200 mile coastline the overheated Pacific Ocean is rising and pressing in imperiling both wildlife and the maritime towns and cities that 27 million people call home In California Against the Sea Los Angeles Times coastal reporter Rosanna Xia asks As climate chaos threatens the places we love so fiercely will we finally grasp our collective capacity for change Xia a Pulitzer Prize finalist investigates the impacts of engineered landscapes the market pressures of development and the ecological activism and political scimmages that have carved our contemporary coastline and foretell even greater changes to our shores From the beaches of the Mexican border up to the sheer cliffed North Coast the voices of Indigenous leaders community activists small town mayors urban engineers and tenacious environmental scientists commingle Together they chronicle the challenges and urgency of forging a climate wise future Xia's investigation takes us to Imperial Beach Los Angeles Pacifica Marin City San Francisco and beyond weighing the rivaling arguments agreements compromises and visions governing the State of California's commitment to a coast for all Through graceful reportage she charts how the decisions we make today will determine where we go tomorrow headlong into natural disaster or toward an equitable refashioning of coastal stewardship

Monoclonal Antibodies Against Bacteria Alberto J. L. Macario, Everly Conway de Macario, 2014-05-10 Monoclonal Antibodies Against Bacteria Volume II provides the basis for understanding new developments of practical importance in the health sciences within the area of microbiology and infectious diseases focusing on advances made possible by monoclonal antibodies This 12 chapter volume starts with the analysis of streptococcal antigens implicated in the causation of rheumatic fever and heart disease to find ways of inducing protective immunity The next chapters deal with the detection of staphylococcal enterotoxins in foods and treatment of staphylococcal food poisoning the classification of meningococcal isolates associated with meningitis and related disorders and the immunology of brucellosis with emphasis on the problem of distinguishing anti-brucella antibodies elicited by vaccination of cattle from antibodies elicited by infection These topics are followed by discussions of the diagnostic and epidemiologic studies of legionellosis the identification of antigens in gram negative bacteria and the development of means to study and control infections by Pseudomonas in cystic fibrosis and other pathologic conditions Other chapters explore the analysis of toxigenicity and neutralization of botulinum toxin the pathogenetic role of Escherichia coli's pili and study of its antigens to understand regulatory networks of the immune system involving anti-idiotypic antibodies The remaining chapters consider the elucidation of antigenic mosaics of archaeobacteria and identification of their molecular signatures in their ecological niches and other life forms These chapters also look into the combination of bacterial genetics with hybridoma technology for elucidating structure function relationships in membrane molecules as well as the strategies methods quality control and other practical aspects connected with industrial production of monoclonal antibodies against bacteria This book will prove useful to internists pediatricians surgeons dentists veterinarians clinical pathologists and laboratory technologists

Naval Power and Expeditionary Wars Bruce A. Elleman, S.C.M. Paine, 2010-12-09 This book examines the nature and character of naval expeditionary warfare in particular in peripheral campaigns and the contribution of such campaigns to the achievement of strategic victory Naval powers which can lack the massive ground forces to win in the main theatre often choose a secondary theatre accessible to them by sea and difficult for their enemies to reach by land giving the sea power and its expeditionary forces the advantage The technical term for these theatres is peripheral operations The subject of peripheral campaigns in naval expeditionary warfare is central to the British the US and the Australian way of war in the past and in the future All three are reluctant to engage large land forces because of the high human and economic costs Instead they rely as much as possible on sea and air power and the latter is most often in the form of carrier based aviation In order to exert pressure on their enemies they have often opened additional theaters in on going regional and civil wars This book contains thirteen case studies by some of the foremost naval historians from the United States Great Britain and Australia whose collected case studies examine the most important peripheral operations of the last two centuries This book will be of much interest to students of naval warfare military history strategic studies and security studies
