

COLDER TIMES

Approximately 20,000 years ago, this is what our planet looked like. The sea level was 125 meters lower, the climate was colder and drier but most importantly, huge ice sheets covered continents since the average temperature was 6°C lower than it is today. From ocean currents, to the fauna and flora, including coastlines and seas, everything was radically different.

The ice sheet in North America is a huge continental ice sheet that extends across the continent and is likely to have had a major impact.

The ice sheet in the North Atlantic region is likely to have had a major impact on the climate.

The ice sheet in the North Pacific region is likely to have had a major impact on the climate.

The ice sheet in the Indian Ocean region is likely to have had a major impact on the climate.

The ice sheet in the Antarctic region is likely to have had a major impact on the climate.

- Ice sheet by the land
- Ice sheet extending to the coast
