Diemut Elisabeth Bubeck

Care Gender And Justice:

Care, Gender, and Justice Diemut Elisabeth Bubeck, 1995 Women's unpaid work at home has not concerned theorists of social justice despite the fact that it renders women vulnerable to exploitation and hence to social injustice. Based on a critical analysis of three conceptions of work and women's work in the materialist tradition of thought—Marx, the domestic labour debate, and Delphy and Leonard—the author develops her own theory of women's work as care. By focusing on the material, psychological, and gendered aspects of care, the theory elucidates how and why care is exploitative as long as it remains women's work and what problems it poses for conceptions of social justice. It also enables the author to develop a striking new interpretation of the much-discussed ethic of care, how it relates to considerations of justice, and the place it has in moral and political philosophy.

This book focuses on gender justice and the health care system. It will be divided into two parts. In Part One, a framework of gender justice will be developed. What is gender justice? What would a gender-just public policy look like? What criteria should such policies meet? In Part Two, the framework will be applied to the area of health care policy, specifically medical research and health care financing and delivery. An analysis of past policies will be made, as well as an analysis of the recently enacted and proposed changes. First published in 1998, Routledge is an imprint of Taylor & Francis, an information company.

Feminist Perspectives on Family Care Nancy R. Hooyman, Judith Gonyea, 1995-08-29. Today women find themselves playing an ever-increasing role in caring for older family members who are frail, developmentally disabled, or suffering from serious mental illness. While this role of women as caregivers has been documented, the actual impact on the lives of women has remained largely unstudied. In this volume, the authors examine caregiving as a central feminist issue, looking at its impact on women socially, personally, and economically. The authors review how changing family structures, the changing economy and workforce, and the changing health care demands of needy adults have impacted on women's lives. They critique existing public and private policies, demonstrating a need for fundamental structural changes in social institutions and attitudes to improve the lives of women. Finally, they propose a social model of care that is oriented toward gender justice, recognition of the work of caring, and its impact upon women socially, personally, and economically. For students, scholars, and practitioners in the field of gerontology, gender studies, and social work, this book is a must.
