Caring An Investigation In Gender Sensitive Ethics:

Caring [microform] : an Investigation in Gender-sensitive Ethics Peta Lyn Bowden,1995 Caring Peta Lyn Bowden,1992 Using a Wittgensteinian approach to understanding this thesis extends and challenges recent feminist discussions of the ethic of care as a gender sensitive corrective to traditional moral theory It elaborates a more complex understanding of the diversity and ambiguity of the ethical possibilities of caring than has been presented in earlier analyses A brief introduction to the contemporary debate is followed by accounts of six different examples of caring practices viz caring attention taking care of oneself mothering friendship nursing and citizenship The aim of this survey is to show that caring constitutes an intricate labyrinth of ethical possibilities the understanding of which involves approaching it from numerous directions Through concern for the similarities and differences between these examples their insights and their oversights the thesis displays the limitations of theories which presume a unified non contexted ethic of care At the same time the detailed descriptions of caring practices affirm the ethical significance of a range of activities that are frequently overlooked in conventional accounts of ethics Caring Peta Bowden,2008-01-28 In Caring Peta Bowden extends and challenges recent debates on feminist ethics She takes issue with accounts of the ethics of care that focus on alleged principles of caring rather than analysing caring in practice Caring Bowden argues must be understood by working through examples Following this approach Bowden explores four main caring practices mothering friendship nursing and citizenship Her analysis of the differences and similarities in these practices their varying degrees of intimacy and reciprocity formality and informality vulnerability and choice reveals the practical complexity of the ethics of care Caring recognizes that ethical practices constantly outrun the theories that attempt to explain them and Bowden s unique approach provides major new insights into the nature of care without resorting to indiscriminate unitary models It will be essential reading for all those interested in ethics gender studies nursing and the caring professions Situated Ethics in Educational Research Helen Simons,Robin Usher,2012-11-12 Ethics has traditionally been seen as a set of general principles which can be applied in a range of situations This book argues that in fact ethical principles must be shaped within different research practices and hence take on different significances according to varying research situations The book develops the notion of situated ethics and explores how ethical issues are practically handled by educational researchers in the field Contributors present theoretical models and practical examples of what situated ethics involves in conducting research on specific areas
