The Japanese Chin Michael Stonewood, 2019-04-12 The Japanese Chin is a breed of toy dog that originates from China. The breed is commonly known as the Japanese Spaniel and was highly popular with Japanese nobility hence why the breed's name alludes to the Japanese. It is believed that the Japanese Chin breed could have originated in around 732 AD. However other records indicate that the Japanese Chin probably would have come into existence during the mid 6th century as this is when the breed was gifted to a Japanese Empress. Within Japanese culture dogs are mainly viewed as working or helper animals. This makes the Japanese Chin unique as the breed was developed for the purpose of companionship. Traditionally the ownership of a Japanese Chin was restricted to only Japanese nobility and royalty. Each group of nobles or royals bred the Japanese Chin to their own standard which has resulted in the Japanese Chin breed being highly varied. Differences in size, body type, eye set and coat density are common. Generally speaking the Japanese Chin has a single overcoat that grows to a medium long length. The breed's coat is commonly colored black and white or red and white. The Japanese Chin is known for its unique state of permanent Strabismus of the eyes, cross eye. The temperament of dogs is normally affected by the following factors: individual personality, heredity, training and socialization. It is therefore important to make sure that you meet the puppy's mother before purchasing a Japanese Chin. It is also important to make sure to thoroughly socialize your Japanese Chin with strangers, children and other animals during its puppyhood. Generally speaking the Japanese Chin is an alert, independent and intelligent breed. The Japanese Chin's temperament has been related to that of
