Wood,1994     Proceedings of the ... International Computer Music Conference ,2005     Composer-Centered Computer-Aided Soundtrack Composition Roland Edwin Vane,University of Waterloo. School of Computer Science,2007-01-01 For as long as computers have been around people have looked for ways to involve them in music Research in computer music progresses in many varied areas algorithmic composition music representation music synthesis and performance analysis to name a few However computer music research especially relating to music composition does very little toward making the computer useful for artists in practical situations This lack of consideration for the user has led to the containment of computer music with a few exceptions to academia In this thesis I propose a system that enables a computer to aide users composing music in a specific setting soundtracks In the process of composing a soundtrack a composer is faced with solving non musical problems that are beyond the experience of composers of standalone music The system I propose utilizes the processing power of computers to address the non musical problems thus preventing users from having to deal with them Therefore users can focus on the creative aspect of composing soundtrack

music The guiding principal of the system is to help the composer while not assuming any creative power and while leaving the user in full control of the music This principal is a major step toward helping users solve problems while not introducing new ones I present some carefully chosen tasks that a computer can perform with guidance from the user that follow this principal For example the system performs calculations to help users compose music that matches the visual presentation and allows users to specify music using the idea of timed regular expressions so that a computer can fill arbitrary amounts of time with music in a controlled manner A prototype application called EMuse was designed and implemented to illustrate the use and benefits of the proposed system To demonstrate that the system is capable of serving as a tool to create music two soundtracks were created for two sample animations It is beyond the scope of the work presented here to evaluate if the system achieves the goal of being a practical tool for composers However the innovations herein discussed are analyzed and found to be useful for soundtrack composition and for future user centered computer music research      Electronic and Computer Music ,1977      Interactive Music Systems Robert Rowe,1993 Interactive Music Systems provides the first comprehensive survey and evaluation of new computer programs that can analyze and compose music in live performance

   Computers and People ,1973      Human-Computer Interaction Julie Jacko,Constantine Stephanidis,2003-09-01 This is the second volume in the HCI International Conference Proceedings 2003 See following arrangement for details

   Computers and Musical Style David Cope,1991      Composing Interactive Music Todd Winkler,2001-01-26 Interactive music refers to a composition or improvisation in which software interprets live performances to produce music generated or modified by computers In Composing Interactive Music Todd Winkler presents both the technical and aesthetic possibilities of this increasingly popular area of computer music His own numerous compositions have been the laboratory for the research and development that resulted in this book The author s examples use a graphical programming language called Max Each example in the text is accompanied by a picture of how it appears on the computer screen The same examples are included as software on the accompanying CD ROM playable on a Macintosh computer with a MIDI keyboard Although the book is aimed at those interested in writing music and software using Max the casual reader can learn the basic concepts of interactive composition by just reading the text without running any software The book concludes with a discussion of recent multimedia work incorporating projected images and video playback with sound for concert performances and art installations
