Art in Action Ellen G. Levine, Stephen K. Levine, 2011 The book's contributors explore the transformative power of the arts therapies in areas stricken by conflict and discuss how and why expressive arts works. They look at the ways it can be used to engage community consciousness and improve social conditions whilst taking into account the issues that arise within different contexts and populations.

An Implementation Study of the "Art in Action Program". Executive Summary Manuelito Biag, Erin Raab, Mary Hofstedt, 2015 Targeting students in grades K-8 Art in Action's program consists of 12 age appropriate lessons per year led by parent and teacher volunteers. The curriculum is based on historically significant artists and their works of art. Through semi-structured discussions students examine a variety of masterpieces learning about the artist as well as particular art styles and techniques. Students then apply the concepts they learned to create original works of art. Art in Action's curriculum is sequential and builds upon previous skills taught while also introducing new material artists vocabulary and techniques. Art in Action partnered with the Gardner Center in a year-long qualitative implementation study of its program in Bay Area schools and beyond to better understand how its curriculum is implemented within and across schools how youth and adults perceive and experience the program and the conditions that either hinder or support implementation. The study described in this executive summary examined five schools in the San Francisco Bay Area four schools outside this region and three schools that previously partnered with Art in Action but no longer implement the program. This report provides an overview of the study's findings as well as further details about the study's findings and key areas for consideration.
