Valles, 1989-08-20 Never am I more I than when I stand serene survey the field weigh my choices set my face in one direction and advance with firm step and joyful heart To know what I want to do and do it is the essence of life Our decisions from the most mundance of day to day living to those fork in the road choices of great consequence chart the course of our existence How can we make decisions carefully and thoughtfully so as to live more deliberately meaningful and happier lives Carlos G Valles author of Mastering Sadhana On Retreat with Anthony de Mello here explores the process of discernment and decision making Using scripture insights from Ignatian spirituality and contemporary examples the author illustrates the how and why of making choices and living comfortably with their consequences whether they be positive or negative If my life is my choices he writes I want my choices to be the best they can be I want to master the art of choosing Architecture Competitions and the Production of Culture,
