Constructions of Risks to Life in News Media Rakan Alibri, 2026-01-22 This book investigates the construction of risks through discourse to provide new insights into the relationship between risk discourse and society It explores how British newspapers used language to discursively construct four different types of risks to life namely terror attacks earthquakes road accidents and heart attacks between 2017 and 2020 examining what makes some risk events newsworthy and how this relates to the way they are perceived The author offers new insights into risk reporting by using an approach combining theories and methodologies from corpus linguistics and critical discourse studies focusing on news values and risk perception Through a focus on risks to life related social actors and consequences he demonstrates salient discursive strategies found in risk reporting including dramatisation naturalisation impersonalisation blame responsibility and risk management These strategies contribute differently to the construction of the risks and can potentially be linked to how the media amplify or attenuate risk perception in society a consequence of media language use This interdisciplinary book goes beyond linguistics to engage with discussions related to media studies e.g the concentration of media ownership in the UK and news values risk literature e.g risk perception sociological theories of risk and risk communication and the relationship between media and risk perception and studies related to each risk

The Price of Precaution and the Ethics of Risk Christian Munthe, 2011-05-19 Christian Munthe undertakes an innovative in depth philosophical analysis of what the idea of a precautionary principle is and should be about A novel theory of the ethics of imposing risks is developed and used as a foundation for defending the idea of precaution in environmental and technological policy making against its critics while at the same time avoiding a number of identified flaws The theory is shown to have far reaching practical conclusions for areas such as bio information and nuclear technology and global environmental policy in areas such as climate change The author argues that while the price we pay for precaution must not be too high we have to be prepared to pay it in order to act ethically defensible A number of practical suggestions for precautionary regulation and policy making are made on the basis of this and some challenges to basic ethical theory as well as consumerist societies the global political order and liberal democracy are identified Munthe s book is a well argued contribution to the PP debate putting neglected justificatory and methodological questions at the forefront His many discussions of alternative accounts as well as his drawing out the consequences of his own suggestion in practical cases give the reader a thorough holistic sense of what justification of PP amounts to Munthe s main case his argumentation for the requirement of precaution as a moral norm is convincing and puts a strong pressure on too narrow alternative suggestions on how it should be perceived and justified and he launches a plausible defence of its practical usability
