

Step 1: Mixing

Mixture of flour, water, salt, yeast & other ingredients is made and kneaded

Step 2. Rising (fermentation)

Fermentation happens when yeast and bacteria convert sugars mainly into carbon dioxide. This causes the dough to rise.

Step 3. Kneading

The more the mixture is kneaded, the more gluten is formed. Gluten causes the dough to become elastic and stretchy.

Step 4. Second Rising

- Second rise is the dough's final rise that happens after shaping and just before baking.
- It allows yeast more time to work, which changes the actual fibers within the dough.
- The second rise helps develop a lighter, chewier texture, and a more complex flavor.

Step 5. Baking

Baking is where dough is transformed into bread.

Baking is done for 20 to 25 minutes, until the crust is golden brown and a loaf sounds hollow to the touch when you tap it on the bottom.

Step 6. Cooling

Cooling process starts at the surface layers of the loaf, and gradually extends into the centre of the bread crumb.

If cooling is not done, then the bread will be gummy or sticky and will lack flavor.

Technology of Breadmaking Stanley P. Cauvain, Linda S. Young, 2007-05-20 To study breadmaking is to realize that like many other food processes it is constantly changing as processing methodologies become increasingly more sophisticated yet at the same time we realize that we are dealing with a foodstuff the forms of which are very traditional New ideas and raw materials are constantly being presented to bakers from wheat breeders millers and ingredient and equipment suppliers for their evaluation In addition there are on going changes in legislation and consumer demands To meet such pressures bakers must be able to better integrate their key raw material wheat flour with other ingredients and processing methods to deliver bread of the appropriate quality Technology of Breadmaking Second Edition sets out to identify and present the new knowledge that has become available in last 10 years as well as update information Like the first edition it provides a useful tool to help bakers scientists and technologists to cope with those changes
