Custodians of Place Paul G. Lewis, Max Neiman, 2009-03-13 Custodians of Place provides a new theoretical framework that accounts for how different types of cities arrive at decisions about residential growth and economic development Lewis and Neiman surveyed officials in hundreds of California cities of all sizes and socioeconomic characteristics to account for differences in local development policies This book shows city governments at the center of the action in shaping their destinies frequently acting as far sighted trustees of their communities They explain how city governments often can insulate themselves for the better from short term political pressures and craft policy that builds on past growth experiences and future vision Findings also include how conditions on the ground local commute times housing affordability composition of the local labor force play an important role in determining the approach a city takes toward growth and land use What types of cities tend to aggressively pursue industrial or retail firms What types of cities tend to favor housing over business development What motivates cities to try to slow residential growth Custodians of Place answers these and many other questions

The Leftmost City Richard Gendron, 2018-04-17 Almost all US cities are controlled by real estate and development interests but Santa Cruz California is a deviant case An unusual coalition of socialist feminists environmentalists social welfare liberals and neighborhood activists has stopped every growth project proposed by landowners and developers since 1969 and controlled the city council since 1981 Even after a 1989 earthquake forced the city to rebuild its entire downtown the progressive elected officials prevailed over developers and landowners Drawing on hundreds of primary documents as well as original previously unpublished interviews The Leftmost City utilizes an extended case study of Santa Cruz to critique three major theories of urban power Marxism public choice theory and regime theory Santa Cruz is presented within the context of other progressive attempts to shape city government and the authors findings support growth coalition theory which stresses the conflict between real estate interests and neighborhoods as the fundamental axis of urban politics The authors conclude their analysis by applying insights gleaned from Santa Cruz to progressive movements nationwide offering a template for progressive coalitions to effectively organize to achieve political power

Building Rules Kee Warner,Harvey Molotch,2001-01-01 Planning the Green City? Mark David Owen Adams,2006 The Impact of Large Landowners on Land Markets Raphael W. Bostic,2009 The chapters in this volume examine the effect large landowners or institutions have on local land markets and the tensions that can arise between public and private interests In the United States the large tracts of land held by private owners are often situated on the fringes of metropolitan areas Frequently this land is in transition from agricultural to urban uses and represents a source of income or a legacy for the next generation Many universities and other non profit institutions own large parcels of land and have a bargaining advantage in town gown issues due to their contribution to the urban economy In Nigeria like much of Africa a considerable portion of land is held privately albeit communally Land ownership and land supply decisions have more to do with family or clan marriages than with the logic of city building This book a result of the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy s September 2006 conference brings together experts who address the following land policy questions What happens when one owner or one institution has significant control over the local land market How do the actions of individual landowners affect our capacity to create cities that work for all How well can these individual actors balance the competing interests of those living in neighborhoods towns cities and regions Despite the tensions that can arise between the stakeholders during the development process the tensions are not the problem Rather they are the challenge and the opportunity to collectively shape our cities

Colorado's Future ,2003      Disappearing Desert Janine Schipper,2008 Phoenix Arizona is one of the fastest growing metropolitan areas in the United States The city s expansion at the rate of one acre per hour comes at the expense of its Sonoran Desert environment For some residents the American Dream has become a nightmare In this provocative book Janine Schipper examines the cultural forces that contribute to suburban sprawl in the United States Focusing on the Phoenix area she examines sustainable development in Cave Creek various master planned suburbs and the Salt River Pima Maricopa Indian Reservation to explore suburbanization and ecological destruction She also explains why sprawl continues despite the heavy toll it takes on the environment Schipper gives voice to community members who have experienced the pressures of sprawl and questioned fundamental assumptions that sustain it She presents the perspectives of the many players in the sprawl debate from developers and politicians to environmentalists and property rights advocates not merely to document the phenomenon but also to reveal how seemingly natural ways of thinking about the land are influenced by cultural forces that range from notions of a rational society to the marketing of the American Dream Disappearing Desert speaks to land use dilemmas nationwide and shows that curtailing suburban development requires both policy shifts and new ways of relating to the land For anyone seeking to understand the cultural basis for rampant development this book uncovers the forces that drive sprawl and searches for solutions to its seeming inevitability      Public Administration Review Leonard Dupee White,2001 Includes section Reviews of books and documents      Subject Guide to Books in Print ,1991

Invisible Partisanship Chang-Ho C. Ji,2008-08-25 In 1890 1930 the election system in American cities introduced nonpartisan ballots into the cities Invisible Partnership evaluates this election scheme and how it disproportionately helps Republicans win local legislative contests and shapes city councils and school boards to produce conservative and pro developmental local policies as it places more Republicans with such political beliefs and policy preferences in the offices Author Chang Ho C Ji asserts that partisan politics is a stronger force behind city and local politics than generally thought ultimately shaping the process and results of local elections and various policy decision making in cities and local School districts
