

Building without Barriers for the Disabled

BY SARAH B. HARRISS AND JAMES H. GARDNER, JR.

At a time when the need for accessible buildings is becoming more and more acute, the special needs of the disabled are being recognized in a new way. This book is a guide to how to design buildings that are accessible to the disabled. It covers a wide range of subjects, from the basic principles of accessibility to the specific details of wheelchair ramps, elevators, and other facilities. The book is written in a clear, concise style, and includes many illustrations and photographs to help illustrate the concepts. It is an essential reference for architects, engineers, and anyone involved in the design of buildings for the disabled.

First, the book discusses the basic principles of accessibility, including the need for accessible buildings, the types of disabilities that affect mobility, and the various barriers that can prevent access. It then goes on to discuss the specific details of wheelchair ramps, elevators, and other facilities. The book includes many illustrations and photographs to help illustrate the concepts. It is an essential reference for architects, engineers, and anyone involved in the design of buildings for the disabled.
