Building Better Roads Iowas Contribution To Highway Engineering 19041974:

Retracing the Dragoon Trail in Iowa Kevin T. Mason, 2026-04-01 In Retracing the Dragoon Trail in Iowa historian Kevin T. Mason presents a vivid and deeply researched account of Iowa's evolving landscape beginning with the 1835 expedition of the First U.S. Dragoons. Drawing from archival records, maps, government surveys, Indigenous histories, and ecological data, Mason explores how Iowa's prairies and wetlands gave way to farms, towns, and transportation networks. He situates these environmental shifts within the broader forces of Manifest Destiny, military expansion, and settler colonialism, while amplifying the voices of the Sauk, Meskwaki, Dakota, and other Indigenous nations whose histories are often marginalized. But Mason doesn't just write about history; he walks it. His 371-mile journey retracing the original dragoon route across Iowa blends scholarship with storytelling captured through video essays, photography, and writing. This modern-day trek featured on Iowa PBS's Iowa Life and Iowa Public Radio's Talk of Iowa brings the past into the present, offering a compelling look at how landscapes remember. The result is a powerful contribution to environmental history, regional studies, and Indigenous scholarship, one that reveals the layered interactions between land use policy and historical change.

Building Better Roads Leo Landis, 1997 The Transportation Research Board, 1920â2020 Sarah Jo Peterson, 2019-12-30 In 1920, state highway engineers, federal officials, and experts from academia were among a small group convened by the National Academy of Sciences to confront the problems of the highway. The public was entrusting them with billions of dollars for good roads, and World War I had proved the feasibility of moving freight long distances by truck. But even new highways were crumbling. They turned to research for solutions. The founders of the Transportation Research Board (TRB) and the generations that followed took on problems such as safety, social equity, and environmental issues. They embraced total transportation, adapting their highway research model to urban transportation and then applying it to rail, marine, and aviation modes. Today, TRB convenes thousands of researchers, practitioners, and administrators every year to advise the government, solve practical problems, foster innovation, and stimulate new research.

In The Transportation Research Board 1920-2020: Everyone Interested Is Invited, Sarah Jo Peterson tells the story of how people and institutions created and have continued to shape TRB. In a compelling narrative accompanied by more than 150 images exploring the history of transportation and research, she argues that TRB can be best understood as an infrastructure one that people purposely designed and devotedly maintained. Despite TRB's institutional complexity, its unique mission, the vast collection of acronyms in its orbit, and the significant changes to the organization in its first 100 years, Dr. Peterson provides a view from 30,000 feet, deftly describing the social, political, and economic context in which transportation and TRB functioned. At the same time, she attends to details of the key events, individuals, and human motivations that shaped TRB's evolution. The author's skills as a historian, her experience in the transportation field, and her manifest ability to tell a good story have produced a book that transportation professionals of all stripes and, for that matter, anyone interested in the history of transportation in the United States should find both engaging and informative and an essential addition to their library
