Bma Guide To Pesticides Chemicals And Health:

The BMA Guide to Pesticides, Chemicals and Health British Medical Association,1992 The number of synthetic organic chemicals used and disposed of by society is increasing at a rate of about 1 000 new chemicals a year In 1986 world production of pesticides amounted to nearly two and a half million tonnes and their use is increasing rapidly There is now enormous pressure from environmental and consumer groups to limit their use and yet the chemical industry have cogent arguments for maintaining high production levels This clear balanced guide to the risks and benefitsinvolved in the use of pesticides and chemicals has been prepared by the British Medical Association s Board of Science and Education and carries the authority of that prestigious body It has been written by experts in response to the growing concern about the possible ill effects of pesticides on human health Additionally it provides guidance to general practitioners and hospital doctors who have an important role in advising the public and patients about the hazards of toxic chemicals This absorbing text with its wealth of concisely presented data and vivid illustrations which include nearly 250 photographs and coloured graphics will enable everyone interested in issues about public health and the environment to gain a much clearer insight into this complex subject

Pollinators and Pesticides Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Environmental Audit Committee,2013-04-05 If farmers had to pollinate fruit and vegetables without the help of insects it would cost hundreds of millions of pounds and we would all be stung by rising food prices Defra Ministers however have refused to back EU efforts to protect pollinators Disease habitat loss and climate change can all affect insect populations but a growing body of research suggests that neonicotinoids are having an especially damaging impact on pollinators The weight of scientific evidence now warrants precautionary action so the Committee is calling for a moratorium on pesticides linked to bee decline to be introduced by 1 January next year An EU wide moratorium on the use of imidacloprid clothianidin and TMX on crops attractive to bees following a recent risk warning from the European Food Safety Authority has also been proposed Many of the UK s largest garden retailers have voluntarily withdrawn non professional plant protection products that contain neonicotinoids A full ban on the sale of neonicotinoids for public domestic use which could create an urban safe haven for pollinators is recommended The pesticide industry must open itself to greater academic scrutiny if it wants to justify its continued opposition to the precautionary protection of pollinators The Government s National Action Plan for the Sustainable Use of Pesticides published earlier this year was a missed opportunity according to the Committee Clearer targets are needed to reduce reliance on pesticides as far as possible And Integrated Pest Management which emphasises alternatives to pesticides but does not preclude their use should be made the central principle of the plan
