

WHAT IS A COMPASS?

A compass is a navigation instrument used to determine cardinal directions, especially the north direction.

It consists of a magnetized needle that points towards the Earth's magnetic north pole, allowing people to orient themselves and know which direction they are facing.

The compass has been used since ancient times by explorers, sailors, and travelers to guide them on their journeys. It is a reliable and practical tool that helps find the way and explore new places, whether in nature or urban environments.
