Busy Times:

The Church Times, 1908 Deadline Scheduling for Real-Time Systems John A. Stankovic, Marco Spuri, Krithi Ramamritham, Giorgio C Buttazzo, 2012-12-06 Many real time systems rely on static scheduling algorithms This includes cyclic scheduling rate monotonic scheduling and fixed schedules created by off line scheduling techniques such as dynamic programming heuristic search and simulated annealing However for many real time systems static scheduling algorithms are quite restrictive and inflexible For example highly automated agile manufacturing command control and communications and distributed real time multimedia applications all operate over long lifetimes and in highly non deterministic environments Dynamic real time scheduling algorithms are more appropriate for these systems and are used in such systems Many of these algorithms are based on earliest deadline first EDF policies There exists a wealth of literature on EDF based scheduling with many extensions to deal with sophisticated issues such as precedence constraints resource requirements system overload multi processors and distributed systems Deadline Scheduling for Real Time Systems EDF and Related Algorithms aims at collecting a significant body of knowledge on EDF scheduling for real time systems but it does not try to be all inclusive the literature is too extensive The book primarily presents the algorithms and associated analysis but guidelines rules and implementation considerations are also discussed especially for the more complicated situations where mathematical analysis is difficult In general it is very difficult to codify and taxonomize scheduling knowledge because there are many performance metrics task characteristics and system configurations Also adding to the complexity is the fact that a variety of algorithms have been designed for different combinations of these considerations In spite of the recent advances there are still gaps in the solution space and there is a need to integrate the available solutions For example a list of issues to consider includes preemptive versus non preemptive tasks uni processors versus multi processors using EDF at dispatch time versus EDF based planning precedence constraints among tasks resource constraints periodic versus aperiodic versus sporadic tasks scheduling during overload fault tolerance requirements and providing guarantees and levels of guarantees meeting quality of service requirements Deadline Scheduling for Real Time Systems EDF and Related Algorithms should be of interest to researchers real time system designers and instructors and students either as a focussed course on deadline based scheduling for real time systems or more likely as part of a more general course on real time computing The book serves as an invaluable reference in this fast moving field Scheduling and Control of Queueing Networks Gideon Weiss, 2021-10-14 Applications of queueing network models have multiplied in the last generation including scheduling of large manufacturing systems control of patient flow in health systems load balancing in cloud computing and matching in ride sharing These problems are too large and complex for exact solution but their scale allows approximation This book is the first comprehensive treatment of fluid scaling diffusion scaling and many server scaling in a single text presented at a level suitable for graduate students Fluid scaling is used to verify stability in particular treating max weight policies and to study optimal control of transient queueing networks Diffusion scaling is used to control systems in balanced heavy traffic by solving for optimal scheduling admission control and routing in Brownian networks Many server scaling is studied in the quality and efficiency driven Halfin Whitt regime and applied to load balancing in the supermarket model and to bipartite matching in ride sharing applications The American Hatter ,1897 "Le roman d'une pussie chat;" *a tale of ye olden times par Henrique (old man) Ringtail ... tr. from the original Sanscrit by F.
